Police veteran Glen Edmonson on patrol

He feels he can change the way things are

By Brenda P. Loukes
Staff Writer

He walks around his vehicle checking the headlights, blinkers, tires; looking for damage to its body. He unlocks the back door, lifts the seat and checks a compartment below for a misplaced or forgotten weapon.

It's 4:15 on a Thursday afternoon; Glen Edmonson, a police officer with Virginia Beach's Second Precinct, is about to begin his eight hour shift of patrolling the area between 17th Street, Atlantic Avenue, and west of Park Avenue.

Once inside the Ford LTD, he removes a rifle from the partition which separates the front seat from the rear reserved for offenders. Five rounds go into the rifle and five go into Edmonson's belt; fully loaded, the weapon is returned to its position of authority.

Driving down the strip, everything seems calm. Only a few tourists are out making the best of a cloudy, humid afternoon. Sensing my desire for an active night, Edmonson explained "You never know what is going to happen, it could be the coldest, rainiest night and it seems that everything is going wrong. You can't ever predict a night."

Feeling a bit embarrassed at being caught with a thirst for action, I sat back and observed Edmonson. As he spoke, his eyes scanned the area. When I asked why, he explained that when driving a beat, one doesn't just sit behind the wheel of a car. The patrol officer also takes cases that come across a small computer sitting by his right knee, as well as cases that he is currently working on, such as burglaries, rapes, or stolen vehicles.

Grey cars, blue cars, two-tone cars; black males, white females; blue eyes, brown eyes; long dark hair, short blond hair, no hair... Edmonson seemed to log in the information pertinent to him without batting an eye.

5:09 p.m.: We were casually driving down Virginia Beach Boulevard when our first call came over the CB radio. Shotgun fire had been heard in a backyard. Two minutes later, we pulled up to the site with three other patrol cars alongside us. My heart began to race as I realized that we were in a potentially dangerous situation. No more thrills of "cops and robbers", as when I was a child, when things got rough then, I could quit. Much to my relief, Edmonson returned to the vehicle saying it was a false alarm, or perhaps somebody had fired at a squirrel.

On the road again, my stomach felt as though I'd just gotten off a roller coaster. I immediately wondered how Edmonson handled this obvious stress.

"There are cops out here that after 10 years can't come out at night. They actually can't come out and work in a police car

'cause they're scared," he explained. "Grown men, who have been good cops for 12-15 years; they just get to a point where they rattle."

Edmonson believes that police work and stress go hand in hand. There is always stress; just being in a police car is stressful. "Everytime I go to a domestic fight, I hear them fighting inside; I knock on the door and the guy knows the old lady called the cops—do they have a gun in there or what?" he said. "When the door opens, there is a little amount of stress there! It's always there. You have to learn to let it roll off your back. You have to learn how to go home and forget about it."

"I try to teach some of the young guys that have ridden with me how to do that but you can't tell somebody—it's like telling your daughter how to go out and fall in love; you have to learn from experience."

Atlantic Ave. ban

Chief Wall studies truck ban effect

VIRGINIA BEACH—Police Chief Charles Wall will report in a month on the effectiveness of the city's new ordinance banning trucks from Atlantic Avenue at night.

In the meantime, City Council Monday afternoon discussed confusion over the ordinance.

Under the ordinance only vehicles registered with the Division of Motor Vehicles as trucks are prohibited from traveling Atlantic Avenue from 40th Street to Second Street during the hours of 7 p.m. to 3 a.m. during the summer season, May 15 to Sept. 30. A "four-by-four" becomes a truck only when its front bumper exceeds 22 inches. Also Mayor Harold Heischberger said, pick-ups are not part of the ordinance.

Councilman H. Jack Jennings, Jr. noted that he had received complaints from owners of four-by-fours and said there was even a four-by-four club or association. Some of the licenses of four-by-fours with raised bumpers, do not have truck licenses, he said. These vehicles are not being stopped, he said.

Wall said that over the first week-end his department issued six summonses under the new ordinance. He said that 19 or 20 tickets also were given for altered vehicles, such as the four-by-fours with raised bumpers. He said that regardless of trucks, the city will have "more cars than we can handle on that street." He said that 30 percent of the accidents on Atlantic Avenue involve trucks, and that trucks are also prohibited from many other streets.

Wall said that violators are given the benefit of doubt and are issued at least two warnings before a summons is issued.

Hurricane awareness

June marks the beginning of another hurricane season for the City of Virginia Beach and the entire Atlantic and Gulf Coasts.

June 3-9 is Hurricane Awareness Week in Virginia Beach, focusing on the dangers of a hurricane and the need to prepare.

Arts program recognized

VIRGINIA BEACH—The Virginia Beach Public School art education program is one of only seven in the nation that has been recognized for its exemplary program by the J. P. Getty Center for Education in the Arts.

City Council Monday afternoon recognized the achievement in a resolution of commendation. Dr. E. E. Brickell, superintendent of schools, said that the school was among 1,600 systems nominated by the Getty Center and the Rand Corporation.

An elimination process left the seven systems of which the Virginia Beach program was the only one in the whole country that met all the criteria, Brickell said.

Recreational use planned for stub streets

VIRGINIA BEACH—The city expects to start construction in the fall on a recreational area on 13th Street between Atlantic Avenue and the Oceanfront.

Mike Barrett, director for the Resort Area Advisory Committee, reported to City Council Monday afternoon that the streets would be closed to traffic, removing 12 parking spaces from the stretch.

City faces health insurance options

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

VIRGINIA BEACH—City and School Board employees will be given a choice of four health insurance plans for the 1985-86 fiscal year.

Each of the plans calls for a higher employee contribution then is currently being paid because of the increased cost on health care. Employees, under the plans proposed by both the city's group Health Benefits Committee and representatives of the School Board, will be paying a higher share of the increased cost than the city.

Council next week will consider a resolution authorizing the city manager to enter into the necessary contracts for group health care coverage for municipal employees. The School Board will be expected to take similar action.

Pop Lane loves to talk

By Janet Yarbrough Meyer
Special To The Sun

He's a short man, not physically imposing, but the twinkle in his eyes invites you to listen to his adventures.

John "Pop" Lane loves to talk. When he does, you can still detect a West Virginia accent. With a voice that can be gentle and comforting or loud and raucous, Pop Lane snares you with his stories.

Pop was a tug boat engineer. "Take every drunk that there is and he can't find a job. Put him on a tug boat. Then if you can hide the whiskey, you might get from here to there. That's about the truth."

Since that was the way it was, Pop had only two rules.

"The only way I'll ever leave a boat is for a man to cuss me or for the captain to be drunk." Pop said it and he meant it.

Pop says women are better listeners. Two men are afraid to reveal their innermost feelings for fear of having their manhood challenged.

Once they were towing a large empty barge out of Brunswick, Georgia. Pop, the chief engineer, knew that if you hit something, the barge would get coming and run over you. It was foggy. Pop was at the wheel. What he didn't know was that the crew had gone to Loretta's Hog Pen and stolen all the women and brought them on board. The captain had sent the deck hand below because he was drunk, and wanted Pop to watch the wheel so he could go below and drink with his woman.

Pop came out of Brunswick on radar and charts. He let out 1,800 feet of line on the barge and figured out a course. He got to Savannah and had to cross the traffic in the main channel. One ship was coming out and one was going in. A collision looked inevitable.

"I didn't know what the hell to do, so just went back and shook the captain. I said, 'Hey, captain, I'm gonna run this mother around. I'm gonna put her around hard and tight and put See SANDBRIDGE, page 3

Pungo festival by numbers

Now that we've all had sufficient time to recover and pat our berry-filled bellies, we can look back on the 2nd Annual Pungo Strawberry Festival for the festive occasion that it was.

We can think of the nice weather, seeing old friends, and of course, the strawberries. The great people who put on the festival think back on all that, but they also think of the festival by numbers. And big numbers they were.

Although as a festival-goer, you may only "guesstimate" by using words like "a lot" or "tons" to describe the numbers of things sold, the Festival coordinators do endless amounts of counting.

And here are some of the numbers they came up with.

- Eight bushels of popcorn were popped.
- 12,000 hamburger buns were used. (And we can assume that 12,000 hamburgers went inside them)
- 9,600 hot dog buns were used. (And we can assume 9,600 hot dogs went inside.)
- 30 whole watermelons were used. (Where did all the seeds go?)
- 2½ tons or 2,500 pounds of pork BBQ were used. (That's a lot of pig!)

There's more, so read on, unless your stomach hurts from thinking about all this food. Those funnel cakes with the powdered sugar that ends up all over your face when you eat one, Festival visitors consumed 1,500 of them.

Twenty thousand pounds of ice were used, mainly in drinks. I wonder how many pieces found their way down someone's back?

And last, but not least, the honored guest, the most popular berry in Pungo—the strawberry. How many of those little guys were munches? A mere 6,640 quarts of the luscious fruit were used in various forms.

The 105,000 people in attendance (five times the number of last year) helped make this Pungo's "Berry Best" festival. —C.L.

Eliminate quotas

Recently, the U.S. Justice Department informed 56 state, county, and city agencies that they should modify their affirmative-action plans so as to eliminate employment quotas for women and minorities. Similarly, the department is urging federal courts to amend previous consent decrees and court orders that contain numerical hiring goals.

In so doing, the department has correctly concluded that preferential hiring treatment based on race, sex or national origin is a violation of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The Justice Department's prudent policy has alarmed a number of cities, such as Los Angeles and New York, that are presently engaged in a numbers game to ensure that their public work force reflects a cross-section of their populations.

The net result has been blatant examples of reverse discrimination that in turn have spawned an endless succession of lawsuits concerning minority and majority access to the workplace.

The U.S. Supreme Court has not decided in what circumstances, if any, public employers may use goals and quotas in hiring and promotion. The high court did rule last summer, in the Memphis firefighters' case, that courts cannot order quotas or give preferential treatment to job seekers who have not been the actual victims of racial discrimination. The Justice Department is, therefore, taking a closer look at the hundreds of affirmative-action decrees in which the federal government is involved.

In principle, affirmative action is an effective means to attract women and minorities to jobs that have previously been denied them. In practice, however, the means often become an end for those who insist that a rigid percentage of public-sector positions be reserved for women and minorities regardless of the applicants' qualifications. And therein lies a primary evil of employment quotas. They perpetuate the impression that these individuals cannot make it on their own merits.

The Justice Department's policy reaffirms the principle of equal opportunity in employment. And that enlightened principle is best served by emphasizing job qualifications rather than hiring quotas. —C.E.C.

Are Rescue Squad drivers dangerous?

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Who is the most dangerous driver in Virginia Beach?

One of the definitions of dangerous is "able or likely to do physical injury." This fits the driving I've seen from some of the members of the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad. In my own personal experience I was forced off the road by one of these people to avoid being injured, while this person was driving his own vehicle. If this is the way the rescue people drive their own cars, I wonder how they drive the rescue units with the lives of other people at risk.

I reported this incident to the captain of the rescue squad, in question, and the reply I got was "I will investigate the charges and take proper action".

The only trouble with this is proper action will not be disclosed, due to the "privacy act". This proper action could be a simple statement asking the person to drive more carefully. It seems to this citizen that any action should be from an outside agency or be made public, because the public's life may be in danger from the careless driving of some of these rescue people.

I also strongly suggest that any funds for the Virginia Beach Rescue Squad be withheld until it can be shown that responsible people are driving the rescue units or proper regulation and training is provided for the driving of the rescue units. From the information in my possession at this time, limited training is given this important part of rescue work and the public may suffer from the inexperience of some of the drivers of the rescue units.

Miss Weyers is greatly appreciated

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

The article "Miss Weyers Goes to Washington" (May 22, 1985) by Heather Weyers was delightful. Lynnhaven Parish Chapter, NSDAR was pleased to have brought her poem "The Lady With A Lamp" to the attention of the Sun and the DAR Statue of Liberty Restoration Committee. Heather's presentation of her poem in Constitution Hall on April 18 brought great credit to the Virginia Beach School system, Great Neck Junior High School, her English teacher Mrs. Susan Poe, her family and, in particular, to Heather herself—a very talented young lady.

The Virginia Beach Sun is to be commended for sharing Heather's creativity with its readers.

Do Americans ever tire of royal gossip? It doesn't appear so. Unlike the ruling personalities of Hollywood, the British monarchy is still adept at remaining an alluring distance from an inquisitive and adoring public.

Grown men don't work at home!

I was tempted to slip away much as I arrived at the editorial desk of The Virginia Beach Sun, no fanfare, no big deal, just a working writer moving on to another project.

Having plugged away at this task over the last fourteen months, through 60 weekly editions of the Sun, plus one tabloid edition of the annual special, Virginia Beach: The B.I.G. Story, it now behooves me to announce that your correspondent will have left the Sun by the time you read this column.

Working with words can be a very rewarding occupation at times. There are few thrills for a writer which can compare to receiving a response to a story you have written, or hearing from a reader that a column you have done might have caused a laugh and lightened someone's day. I want to thank those of you who have written or voiced your support of my efforts, whether they be comments on this column or, concerning the general makeup of the paper.

As regular readers of this space know by now, Virginia Beach is the city in which I spent my growing years, passing through adolescence into young manhood.

Ed's notes

By Samuel Martinette, Jr.

After high school it was off to the famous school of hard knocks, where I learned to wash dishes, polish combat boots, collect bills, cut college classes, interview welfare applicants and manage restaurants all the time writing stories about my friends, people I met, or things I saw, all the while storing impressions as a squirrel stores nuts.

My grandfather Keay, on my maternal side, was a fire chief; grandfather Martinette, a carpenter. When I was a child my father, aunts and uncles were generally self-employed businessmen. No-one in my family had ever done such a thing as to announce he would make a living from words and ideas. For many years, indeed even to this day, many of my relatives think me a bit addlebrained to pursue such a career. When fiancéeing, I work at home, a thing most suspect to relatives. They all know grown men don't work at home!

But the writing trade has its good points, of course. There is: feeling of power when an image you create moves someone to laughter or anger, no matter which. There can be a feeling of accomplishment when you do a story in a style you feel you can call your own; in a manner different than any other.

On the other hand we have all heard the cliché "wards are a dime a dozen." Those were the good old ratered in Virginia Beach. So you see, even though I shall vacate this space, I will continue on and perhaps we will meet again in the pages of public print. Until then, thanks for reading me, and thanks for your friendship.

However, it is the profession I have chosen, and move along I must. Next up for me will be a book production job for a non-profit organization soon to be headquartered in Virginia Beach.

So you see, I will continue on and perhaps we will meet again in the pages of public print. Until then, thanks for reading me, and thanks for your friendship.

the barge on there with her. Somebody has got to get up."

"He seen I was serious, so he stumbled out there and got the deck force out. They got the barge in, and we got in."

As soon as they got in, Pop went to a phone and called the tug's owner.

"I'm coming home," was all he said.

"What's the matter, chief? I don't know if I can get somebody down there or not," the owner replied.

"I don't give a damn if you can get somebody down here or not," Pop said. "I'm coming home."

They brought in a new crew and fired everyone. And Loretta was sitting on the dock waiting for her girls.

Tugging had its quiet moments, too. The best part was the solitude. Pop liked being on deck at night when everyone else was asleep. He felt it was a time to look at the world and get yourself together.

"You're on a 67-to 87-to 100 foot boat out there with seas 20 feet high. You can really understand how damn small you are, buddy. You're not even a fly speck on this thing. It lets you really get into yourself."

According to Pop Lane, most tugboat men were just "good ole boys" who worked just about anything for their own.

Lane grew up not having much of his own. His early childhood in the West Virginia mountains during the Depression reads like a Pop tied a rope to his life jacket and dove in to save the men in the water. The man on deck didn't give Pop enough line as he got to the top of a wave. The force pulled his life jacket off...

Dickens novel. His parents died before he was three years old.

Raised by a grandmother and two uncles, Lane was shuffled from house to house depending on who could afford to feed an extra mouth that week. He stayed in Smithers, West Virginia until he was almost 17, then lied about his age and joined the Navy just in time for World War II.

World War II took Pop Lane to France and he was the gun captain on a patrol boat off the coast of Normandy. A war was being fought, but a friendship was also being forged with a Texan, a rebel and renegade named H. A. Cady.

Pop was a loner. As he stood on the deck one night staring at the water, someone approached and stood next to him.

"I have a dollar," H. A. Cady said.

"So do I," answered Pop. "Why don't we put them together and go ashore?" said Cady. The seed for a friendship was planted.

Cady and Lane became good friends. In the months that followed, Cady would prove how strong their friendship was. In 1943, a depth charge went off too close to the boat and knocked Pop overboard. Cady dived in and brought Pop back.

"Men don't talk about what's really important," he went on. "What's inside of me. What's inside of you. But you can with a woman. You can't woman to woman or man to man. If you do it woman to a woman you're bitching. If you do it man to man, you're crying."

Many types of people have passed through Lane's life. Being introspective, he understands himself the best.

John Lane has mellowed over the years. He believes in his family. He loves his wife and courts her everyday.

He is concerned about the state of the world and what his grandchildren will have to face. The one thing about Lane that seems to have remained constant through all the changes in his life of life.

"Hot damn, has this been a wizard! Now if He's giving them time in doubles," Pop laughed, "I'll take one more."

Cady also saved Pop during the Normandy invasion. An English tug went down during a gale. Pop tied a rope to his life jacket and dove in to save the men in the water. The man on deck didn't give Pop enough line as he got to the top of a wave. The force pulled his life jacket off.

Cady had promised Thelma, Pop's new bride, that he would take care of him. So he plunged into the swirling water to bring Pop back.

The end of the war separated Pop and Cady. Not until 37 years later was their friendship renewed.

Their reunion quickly turned into a time of mourning. Lane knew that Cady had a son whom he had named after Pop. The first time Pop would see Cady's son would be at the boy's funeral.

John Lane Cady was killed on his trip to meet the man he was named for.

The bond between the two men was strengthened because of their mutual loss.

Pop Lane has since bought five acres next to his friend's spread in Texas. Every year he makes a trip to spend some time with Cady.

Pop understands about friends. He realizes that the war gave him a friend he wouldn't otherwise have chosen. When he chooses now, he prefers women.

Pop says women are better listeners. Two men are afraid to reveal their innermost feelings for fear of having their manhood challenged.

"To have a friend, you have to love a friend, and there are certain things you do for a friend you don't do for other people," he said. "Men fight away from affection. Unless it's a macho-type friendship, let's go out tonight and stomp hell out of somebody."

"You find very few men who have depth of friendship," he said, "unless they picked it up during the war."

Tidewater Red Cross elects new board

VIRGINIA BEACH—The Tidewater Chapter American Red Cross recently held its annual meeting at the Pavilion Towers Hotel in Virginia Beach.

Two Clara Barton Meritorious Awards were presented to volunteers Roy R. Charles and Justine Nusbbaum. These awards are prestigious National Honor Awards.

Mary Hardcastle, chapter chairman of Volunteers, was presented a Certificate for Exceptional Volunteer Service. Robert Shorter, coordinator of Motor Services, was presented the Vice President's Award for Employee Excellence. Shorter was one of only sixteen Red Cross employees nationwide to receive this prestigious award.

Assistant Manager James K. Hamblin presented a National Red Cross Certificate of Appreciation for the Chapter's African Famine Relief fundraising efforts to Melvin T. Blasingham, Jr., chairman of the Board of Directors.

Mrs. Pearl D. Mallory, branch manager, Virginia Beach Branch, was announced as a recipient of the "Professional Woman of the Year in Hampton Roads" Award.

Roy R. Charles, longtime Red Cross volunteer and benefactor, was unanimously voted as a Life Member of the Board of Directors by the Chapter membership. He was presented with a framed panorama picture of the Roy Charles Red Cross Center building in Norfolk.

The meeting continued with the election of new members of the Board of Directors. They are as follows: Joseph L. Griggs, John Wilkins, Jean-Marie Bellis, Anne Dickenson Jordan, Bailey Condrey, Madeline Sly, Carter Winn, C. Fred Bateman and Kurt M. Rosenbach.

Chairman Melvin T. Blasingham then concluded the meeting with some closing remarks about the challenges facing the Red Cross during the upcoming year.

Summer classes offered

The Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind at Hampton (VDSB-H) will operate a six-week Summer Extended Year Program from June 16 through July 26. Students eligible to participate include deaf, blind, deaf, mentally handicapped and blind mentally handicapped children of school age presently enrolled at VDSB-H.

Blind students between the ages of 9 and 18 from neighboring school divisions will be enrolled on a limited basis. Enrollment is also open to a limited number of deaf, blind, deaf mentally handicapped or blind mentally handicapped public school students for an intense diagnostic evaluation program. (Diagnostic students will be served for a minimum of three weeks.) Students participating in the summer's heavily activity-oriented program will be both residential and day.

Library bids too high

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

VIRGINIA BEACH—City Council has rejected all bids on the Central Library Project because the lowest bid is close to a million dollars more than the estimate.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck recommended rejection of the bid and bringing the project within current funding prior to rebidding.

This recommendation was approved by a vote of 5-4 over an alternate recommendation by architect Laszlo Aranyi to accept the low bid of Conrad Brothers, Inc. for $9,287,500 and negotiate with him to come down within the budgeted funds.

The architect's estimate was $7,839,677. The Capital Improvement Plan budget for the project is $8,400,000.

Voting in favor of rejecting the bids were Councilmen Robert G. Jones, H. Jack Jennings, Jr. and Louis R. Jones; Councilwomen Barbara Henley, and Vice Mayor Reba McClanan. Voting against the motion were Mayor Harold Heischberger, Councilwoman Nancy Creech, and Councilmen John A. Baum and Robert Fentress.

The bids ranged from Conrad's to $9,795,000.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. abstained, he said, for the first time in 11 years because he thought Council should wait.

He said that roads and schools are important "but this type of thing is getting in the way." He said he was not opposed to the Central Library but in favor of putting it on a back burner.

Creech said that the library was needed as much as some other building.

Baum also favored negotiations. He said that General Motors is planning to build a new plant and 20 states are after the business. GM has made it clear, Baum said, that it is only interested in locations where the cultural and educational facilities are excellent.

Jennings said that Council was not debating the need for the library but whether to accept the low bid. The matter was discussed in executive session, he said. He suggested reviewing the remarks of Herbert L. Powers, Public Works, who said that past experience has shown that to negotiate ten percent out of a low bid is not usually in the owner's best interest.

Jennings' reasons were that the owner does not receive actual value for items reduced or changed; the reduction is not competitive; and reduction by negotiation has led to contract problems during construction; when the low bid exceeds the estimate by 18.5 percent factors other than market conditions are the problem. A normal bidding

Goodwill Industries 60 years old

Goodwill Industries of Tidewater, Inc. is celebrating its 60th Anniversary of service to the Tidewater area.

The concept of serving the handicapped and disadvantaged has been the key purpose of this agency from its conception of doing relief work among the poor as well as operating a free employment department.

During these first years it has experienced a strong, positive bond with the Navy. In fact, initially Goodwill of Tidewater has as its main purpose to assist those who came to Norfolk to work on the Army and Navy bases as well as those stranded here after World War I.

A variety of buildings such as a morgue, stable, warehouse, garage and store fronts have been utilized as bases of operation.

In 1949 the agency was moved into a block long building at 431 East Brambleton Avenue where it has been able to grow and develop into a major rehabilitation center and industry.

The Norfolk Naval Base has provided Goodwill with a crucial boost in offering employment positions for the handicapped.

Two federal contracts at the Base provide a stable financial structure for the Work Center. The two contracts are for pallet repair and commissary shelf stocking.

Overall there are sixty-eight handicapped employees at Goodwill. Their placements consist of a variety of jobs such as pallet manufacturing and repair, commissary stocking, retail sales, involving merchandising, inventory control and sales. Instruction is given in techniques of loading and unloading vehicles and laundry operation.

Award winners

Stihl safety films win CINE awards

VIRGINIA BEACH—Three chain saw safety films produced by Image and Sound Productions for Stihl Incorporated have been awarded prestigious Golden Eagle Awards by the Council on International Nontheatrical Events (CINE).

The winning films (in VHS, 16mm, and Fairchild cassettes) won the safety/training film categories. The 14-minute full-color films entitled: "Chain Saws and Common Sense for the Pro Cutter" were filmed in formats geared to three different geographical areas and the cutting conditions found in those regions. Available in either Lake States, Northwest or Southeast versions, the films are all designed to make the professional chain saw operator in the United States more aware of the dangers inherent in his profession.

CINE award ceremonies were held recently in the Washington Plaza Hotel in Washington, D.C. Jack Guthrie, marketing service manager, and Jackson D'Armond, advertising manager, represented Stihl Incorporated at the awards event. The ceremonies featured special screenings of winning films and receptions that attracted foreign diplomats, government officials, and film and television leaders from across the country.

CINE began in 1957 as the outgrowth of a conference called by the National Education Association's Department of Audiovisual Instruction. Over 700 films were judged this year. CINE treasurer Wellstood W. Tipton notes that by the time a film reaches the finals, it has been seen by a preliminary and semi-final panel of qualified jurors who must screen hundreds of entries in twenty-five different CINE categories.

Dibbern is promoted by Beach Plaza

VIRGINIA BEACH—Audrey Dibbern has been promoted to assistant general manager of Virginia Beach Plaza-Hotel. The announcement was made by Nick Economos, owner of Economos Properties, hotel management company developing the Virginia Beach Plaza-Hotel.

As assistant manager, Dibbern is responsible for coordinating the managerial staff and overseeing guest relations for the Virginia Beach Plaza-Hotel, currently under construction on Bonney Road. The Virginia Beach Plaza-Hotel is one of only two Plaza Hotels franchised by the Howard Johnson Company.

Dibbern has been with Economos Properties since 1980. In addition to assistant general manager, she is also office manager for Economos Properties. Previously, she was an executive assistant. She has also served in the United States Navy and as a public relations assistant for Southern Ice Company in Valdosta, Georgia.

Dibbern attended Stone Business College in New Haven, Connecticut. She resides in Virginia Beach.

Meier is named in-house attorney

VIRGINIA BEACH—Goodman Segar Hogan Residential Sales Corporation recently announced the appointment of a new in-house attorney, according to Jack Pope, executive vice president.

Christina E. Meier, formerly of the Norfolk law firm of Decker, Cardon, Weintraub, Thomas and Hitchings, is now associated with the company as director for its Legal Services Department. Meier graduated as an Echols Scholar from the University of Virginia in 1979 and received her law degree in 1983 from Emory University School of Law.

In her new position with Goodman Segar Hogan, Meier will assist the company and its associates in avoiding legal complications by addressing and working through potential problem areas before they develop.

Women's finances

A recent report by the American Council of Life Insurance (ACLI) shows that the financial status of women is changing rapidly, and, in some cases, sharply. Drawing upon a wide variety of sources, such as the Census Bureau, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the Internal Revenue Service, ACLI's report reveals an interesting, changing picture about women and their finances.

Financial Planning and Investments By Madeline Fortunato

Here are some of the findings: In 1982, 90% of women had some form of income. Not dramatic you say? Well, in 1930, only half of the American women did; and while the percentage of women has been increasing in this regard, men's real income has been on the decline.

In 1975, 15% of women had some interest income. In 1982, over 50% did. The number of adult women owning stock rose 44% between 1981 and 1983, while the number of male shareholders grew at only half that rate. The typical first-time investor in the early 1980's was female, 34 years old, and married.

During the period 1980-1983, women represented 65% of every 100 new members of the labor force, up from the 1970's when 57% of every 100 additions to the labor force were women.

In 1983, women represented 32% of the "executive administrative, and managerial" category, up from 19% in 1970.

Women's attitudes have changed concerning a desire to either stay home or to have a job. In 1974, 34% chose the job, while 66% preferred to stay home. In 1982, 48% chose the job, while 47% preferred to be in the home.

On the negative side however, women comprised 52% of the population over age 15, but made up 61% of the "poor" population in that age group, and families maintained by single women are nearly five times more likely to be in the "poverty" level, than married couples.

Beach engineers elected Consulting Engineers Council of Virginia

RICHMOND—Albert E. Rollins and Ron D. Foster, both practicing professional engineers in Virginia Beach, have been elected, respectively, to president and vice president of the Consulting Engineers Council of Virginia (CEC/V) for 1985-1986. They will assume their posts June 1 in ceremonies at the organization's annual meeting in Roanoke.

Rollins is president of Rollins & Associates, P.C., 4604 Westgrove Court. He is a graduate of Pennsylvania State University and has been in the private practice of engineering in Virginia Beach and Norfolk for 16 years. He will automatically become president of CEC/V for 1986-1987.

Foster is a principal and vice president of Bowman & Associates, P.C., at 5648

Southern Blvd. A graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Foster has been in private practice for more than 10 years.

Both men are licensed professional engineers in Virginia.

The Council, which has its headquarters in Richmond, is composed of 90 private engineering firms across the state which offer services in civil, mechanical, electrical, structural, geotechnical, and many other areas of engineering. The Council represents the business management, legislative and regulatory interests, consistent with the public interest, of those firms. Its members annually design millions of dollars in public works and private industry facilities.

contingency would be five to six percent.

Jennings moved to adopt Muehlenbeck's recommendation. He said he called a number of professionals and they were of the same opinion.

Baum said he generally supported the staff, but saw Jennings' stand as a political issue. He pointed out to Jennings that he hadn't backed up the staff on the budget or Lake Gaston.

Jennings retorted that there seemed to be two sets of standards in Council. When the shoe is on the other foot, he said, the scenario is different. He added that he would have preferred placing the library in a central location next to Tidewater Community College on land owned by the city. That would have saved the city $2 million, he said. The library will be located on Virginia Beach Boulevard. Jennings said, however, that he will support the project if it is rebid.

R. Jones said that he did not want to delay the building, but was concerned about the magnitude of the difference. He said that so much would have to be changed.

Jones moved to adopt the city manager's recommendation, seconded by Jennings.

Hurricane awareness discussed

As the first week in June is Hurricane Awareness week, R. Lee Eskey, Emergency Services coordinator of the City of Virginia Beach, will present a program entitled "Hurricane Awareness" on Wednesday, June 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the Great Neck Area Library (1251 Bayne Drive).

The program will include a movie, informational handouts and a discussion of emergency procedures for residents to take in the event of a hurricane. A question and answer period will follow the discussion. Advance registrations are required. To place registrations or to learn more about the program or hurricane preparedness Sun readers should call the library at 481-6094.

The whimsical Charleys

Opening June 14 at the Howard Johnson Oceanfront

CHARLEYS, a new synonym for dining in Virginia Beach is about to open its doors...to an elegant brownstone foyer encircled with etched and stained glass...and more 'french' doors...open to formal dining. A brass enrailed central bar and interior street lights are centerpiece to a softly curved open seating area for casual dinners, appetizers, drink...all to suit your every whim.

And like the earlybird construction work force now busy to complete every new detail, CHARLEYS will soon be open for breakfast...with the identical pinache and service only the handful of these unique theme restaurants have perfected.

It was the instant success of the Danville location, No. 3 in the chain and the first to be housed by Southeastern, the Howard Johnson ownership, that evoked interest (simultaneously to two North Carolina openings) at the 37th Street and Atlantic address. Oddly enough for a hotel wh... fish practically leap in schools from the oceanfront—where fine seafood is the local specialty—where local clientele have been exposed to a myriad of restaurants—CHARLEYS opens their restaurant No. 6. But according to General Manager Robert E. Lowry it came as no surprise, because it takes a long time to develop a mastery of cuisine and environment and Bob contends that CHARLEYS has the unique culinary key...a way to escape the monotony of regularly dining out. "The philosophy of CHARLEYS", according to Bob, of a previous three year association with Colonial Williamsburg, "is the ability to have a tavern like dining yet the ability to have a formal environment but the food is the same throughout. All dishes are prepared by recipe. The lunch through dinner menu stays the same. The quality and the price doesn't fluctuate. The dinner that wants to go out regularly and doesn't want to spend $8-$13 for dinner has the opportunity to order a lunch priced but dinner sized item." The CHARLEYS multi-level dining theme offers environment change without restriction in cuisine. The food displays and menu selection is diverse...from a Veal St. Charles, Beef Wellington...to a Nacho Salad. If a group of people choose to dine out there is no influence for everyone to order a complete dinner.

CHARLEYS, No. 6 will also have an extensive wine list. States Bob, "Because you have to vary to meet your culture, we'll stock 55 different varieties. We're here to be competitive—to cover the full expanse from elegant bordeaux...to Virginia wines.

The creation of miniature environments within one restaurant is obviously a time consuming and costly process. All CHARLEYS employees undergo a 10 day training program in a classroom like environment. "Being honestly aware of the interest of the people...that's our guideline. If you take time to teach them well, the attitude becomes contagious." And Bob has made all cautious moves to Virginia Beach from his restaurant staff selection including Bob Vollrath of the Roanoke CHARLEYS, bar and creative drink manager, Mike Shipley, Kitchen Manager, Dennis Kimberle and Julie Russell, Managers, to perfect timing and marketing techniques.

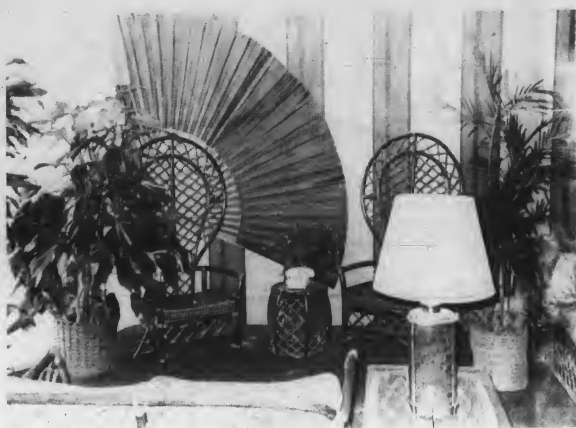

Entertainment! Opening the 20th is the CHARLEYS Dinner Theatre—"theatre in the round" with seated full dinners, cocktails prior and during the show. Featuring seven different plays every Thursday-Sunday. "We will be using all local talent...we want the local people to know we're here for them." And CHARLEYS recently displayed their local enthusiasm with sponsorship in the Miss Virginia Beach Pageant and has been announced the host of the 1986 pageant.

"We want the locals to feel welcome here—to call for reservations and know they will be paid attention to...we're not here to be pretentious—we're just providing as much as we can so that people can be whatever they want to be in our restaurant."

Uniquely enough you can do just that...from creating your own pizza—a new specialty idea where you create your own recipe and it's served in a special CHARLEYS ceramic skillet—a late nite menu feature.

Dinner specialties will be available. Small and large group banquet facilities for 5 to 150 with the same tasteful concern prevails. have your favorite concoction...you can create your own. But CHARLEYS is not here to become a beach bar - IT'S A DINING ESTABLISHMENT ON ALL DIFFERENT LEVELS. Opening June 14...to satisfy your every whim. CSR

Bob Lawry - Charleys - General Manager

"Our frosty frozen drinks are as exciting as the alliteration...if we don't have your favorite...you can create your own! — Bob Vallrath

In the chapter entitled "Table Talk", Barry reports a hilarious scene at a formal state banquet in which a young footman was serving a Dame Commander of the Order of the British Army. What happened after the coachman's gilt jacket button became entangled with the military ribbons on the bosom of her evening gown has to make one laugh.

And how does the royal family manage to remain healthy and wealthy? From an employee's point of view, the clan can be downright cheap. Prince Charles' parsimonious habits include squeezing the last bit of toothpaste from the tube (he has a silver gadget, completed with the Prince of Wales' emblem, to assure this economy). Prince Philip believes that "Wine is far too expensive in restaurants" and simply sends his own stock on ahead of time.

Royal Secrets is an entertaining yet undemanding volume about a much loved family. Whether you're an unabashed fan of Queen Elizabeth and her royal relatives or simply an uninvolved celebrity-watcher, you'll enjoy Barry's reminiscences. It's a relaxing read for vacation time.

Police patrol on Atlantic Ave

"You jump from one little call to another, give some advice and you watch them," he explained later. "They pay attention to you if you carry yourself good and you're honest with them. All a lot of people want is a little company to come see them. They want to sound off a little and then walk off."

With 11 years of service, Edmonson has seen and been through a lot. Divorced, he feels the stress of the job makes a normal marriage very difficult.

"You grow apart; you see more," he said. "You have a husband that is a cop, he's going to be seeing suicide, burglaries, kids with bug bites; he's going to be reading or being told at roll call about a cop in Ohio or New Jersey, or Portland, Oregon, that got his head blown off from stopping some kid with expired tags. He's going to be thinking, it's my turn, plus he's got all the other problems everybody else has, he's got to pay VEPCO."

Edmonson supports programs for families working with the police departments in an effort to reduce this stress factor. Wives being able to ride along with their husbands and having counselors available at the precincts are such programs that Edmonson feels Virginia Beach lacks.

"If I could turn the clock back and go back to school, I would do a paper on police officer marriages and stress—the psychological factors of police work and how it differs in a relationship—how it separates people."

6:15 p.m.: We were driving in a middle class, predominantly white neighborhood. There had been a burglary a few days before and some neighbors had seen a possible suspect in the neighborhood at the time.

Walking down the street, near the site of the crime, was a man fitting the description of the suspect. I noticed the man looked out of place in this particular neighborhood, so did Edmonson. He decided to stop and ask a few questions. After Edmonson questioned the man, he let him go on his way. I suspected Edmonson thought this person was connected to the burglary and knew more than he let me to believe. He put me at ease, explaining that the police department had fingerprints from the crime and that the person he stopped had been previously involved in criminal activity, therefore his fingerprints were also on file. If the prints match up, the police know where the suspect lives.

Next, a stolen vehicle had turned up in a parking lot. At 6:30 p.m. we arrived at the scene and spoke with the owners. A dent in the car, a stolen camera, and no gas, but the car was found.

"You become a loner, you don't associate with the people you talk to. They are all the same, they have a complaint," Edmonson said. "You train yourself not to become too personally involved. So you're basically spending 40 hours a week in a car, thinking is this the night? it is always in the back of your mind."

"You develop good tactics out here, good tactics to where you can survive. After 11 years of service, I think I've developed good tactics, where I'm safe. I'm careful—that constantly reminds you of who you are and the dangers."

The rain began to fall as we drove to Rogue's Gallery. The parking lot was not full at 8:30 p.m. but the nightlifers were beginning to come out in their evening costumes and perfect hairstyles.

"Things change here every year. The mood of the people has changed; this summer I've noticed dirtier people are back," Edmonson said, glancing toward those by a building. "The punks and the new waves are kind of fading out and the dirties are coming back in. It's the local bums. They migrate south. You'll see them all night long, living on these street corners, bumming, with their head down, walking along trying to find a quarter on the street."

The night was quiet, things were calm. A message from Edmonson's buddy, another police officer in a different beat, comes across the computer screen, "Dead night here, U?" Edmonson sends a message back, "Same here." Time for a coffee break. We would all meet at 7-Eleven.

A case flashes across the computer. A fraud case at a Beach restaurant and bar. The coffee and the buddy would have to wait. Once at the restaurant, we found that a customer wouldn't pay a drink bill. After some questioning and proffing tails, the individual was arrested because he had no identification and could not remember his address.

Back at the police station, the man was frisked, then spoke with the magistrate. The restaurant dropped the fraud charges but the man was arrested for being drunk in a public place.

I had one last question in my mind, if the job of a police officer is so lonely and stressful, why had Edmonson stayed for 11 years with plans to stay another 19 years until retirement?

"Being young, 23 years old when I came on, I said, hey I can do something, I can change the way things are. I can make it where these people don't have to go to bed at night and stick a broom against the door," he explained. "But things always stay the same."

Vines for unbeatable summer color

By Jay Mears
McDonald Garden Center

Hey gardeners, have I got one for you! It's called Mandevilla and you've got to try it this summer or you'll be missing one heck of a plant. Mandevilla is a fast growing tropical vine that produces masses of bright pink blooms all summer long. In fact, it'll keep on flowering right up until our first heavy frost in the fall. It's a hot weather plant, performing best in our hot Tidewater summer. It likes all the sun it can get and is bothered by few pests. It's fast-paced vining growth habit will wrap itself around most anything. The flowers are trumpet shaped and produced in such abundance that once you try Mandevilla, you'll plant it every year thereafter.

There's many uses for Mandevilla. It can be planted in containers and allowed to climb a trellis or be planted at the base of an arbor and allowed to cover it. We plant it right in the ground at the base of fence posts in front of the garden center each year. It literally covers the fence each summer with its beautiful pink blooms. Mandevilla is inexpensive and one of the best buys in gardening today for what it does—and that's bloom and bloom and bloom and...

Alamanda is another tropical vine worthy of recognition and a spot in your garden this summer. Alamanda is a yellow flowering woody vine bearing a profusion of trumpet shaped flowers throughout the summer and fall. It's not quite as aggressive in its growth habit as Mandevilla but it can be considered a fast grower. In fact, its culture is almost identical to Mandevilla, the only difference being its color and less aggressive vining habit. In a container around the deck or patio where this plant can best be appreciated.

One more possibility for a summer blooming vine is the unusual and very beautiful passion flower vine. The passion flower has one of the most interesting and spectacular blooms that I know of. In fact, it's the unusual flower shape with its very conspicuous petals that have contributed to its name. Passion flower vine is also tropical and summer blooming. It's a vigorous climber that is easy to grow and does best in a sunny area. It isn't quite as prolific a bloomer as Mandevilla and Alamanda, but the uniqueness of each individual flower is fascinating. The color of passion flower varies with variety, but the red and blue types are extremely attractive.

It is important to note here that with all three of these vines we're talking about tropical vines. This means they won't survive our winters when left outdoors. But if cut back and brought indoors you stand a good chance of getting through winter until it's safe to move them outdoors again. Even if you decide to replant and start over with a new plant each year they all grow so fast and perform so well that it will be well worth your investment. So try these summer blooming vines this year. Right now is an excellent time to get started with them. If you haven't already discovered these blooming treasures you'll be impressed with the results.

Happy gardening!

Museum volunteers needed

The Virginia Beach Maritime Museum needs volunteers to serve as docents to greet visitors and provide assistance in the galleries or gift shop.

The museum hours are: Winter: Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m., and Sunday 12 Noon - 5 p.m.; Summer: Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. - 9 p.m. and Sunday 12 Noon - 5 p.m.

They offer youth programs, school tours, open houses, civic and service presentations, and many other special events. The volunteer Sun readers should contact Sara Jane Smith at 422-1587.

Hearing set for bikeway plan

The City of Virginia Beach will hold two public hearings for the purpose of adopting a revised city bikeway plan. The Bikeway Plan identifies the type of location of bicycle facilities for future construction. The draft revised plan has been prepared by the Mayor's Committee on Bikeways. The public is invited to review and make comments on this draft at the following two Public Hearings: 7:30 p.m., Thursday, June 6, Room 117, Kempville, Recreation Center, 800 Monmouth Lane; 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, June 11, Room 101, Virginia Beach Pavilion, 1000 19th Street.

Copies of the draft revised bikeway plan are available at the Planning Department, Suite 115, Operations Building at the Municipal Center.

With questions concerning the plan or hearings, Sun readers should call William Cashman, in the Planning Department at 427-4621.

Sky Watch

A Monthly Feature Prepared By The Science Museum of Virginia

JUNE SKY CHARTS: To use these sky charts, face either north or south and hold the charts directly in front of you with the horizon on the bottom. The charts show the brightest stars and planets between the horizon and the part of the sky directly overhead during the early evening hours this month.

CONSTELLATIONS: As the summer season approaches, the dominant constellation of spring, Leo the lion, begins his descent from the southern sky. Regulus marks the "paw" of the lion and is the brightest star visible in this constellation. Other bright stars to notice in this area of the sky include Arcturus, high overhead, and Spica, closer to the southern horizon.

In the northern sky, two bright stars of the summer heavens can be found in the east. Vega is part of Lyra and is one of three stars that form the Summer Triangle. Deneb, which marks the tip of the Northern Cross, is another bright star in the triangle pattern. To the west, look for the Gemini twins, Castor and Pollux, and closer to the horizon, the bright star Capella.

PLANETS: Just after sunset, look for Saturn low in the southeast. The planet will move through the constellation Libra during the month. The planets Jupiter and Venus

The city which is now paying $58 a month toward health insurance costs for its 3,317 employees will pay $60 a month per employee per month under the proposed plans. Health insurance has been carried by Prudential for the past three years.

The present employee contribution is $4.67 for a single subscriber; $27.65 for a subscriber and one minor, and $75.34 for a family. In addition to the $58 a month contribution, the city during 1985 paid a supplement of $1,742.569.

The proposed plans and the employee cost include: HMO Plus (Home Maintenance Organization), $38 for an individual subscriber, $35.09 for a subscriber and one minor, and $107.86 for a family.

United Medical Plan of Virginia (HMO), $11.32 for one subscriber; $47.01 for a subscriber and one minor, and $124.82 for a family.

Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Virginia, $150 deductible per person and $300 per family, $16.11 per subscriber; $62.81 for a subscriber, and one minor and $151.67 for a family.

Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Virginia, deductible of $500 per person, $1,000 per family, $8 per subscriber; $35.13 for subscriber and one minor, and $94.12 for a family.

Assistant City Manager Giles Dodd said that each one dollar a month added to the city's contribution per employee amounts to $40,000 of the total cost of the city program, and for school board employees, $50,400.

A survey made by Johnson and Higgins, Inc. indicates that employees wanted alternatives.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said that the rates are fixed for one year and the city will be informed of any increase in February.

The problem of additional liability for the city occurs over what the insurance company accepts liability for, said Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy, Jr.

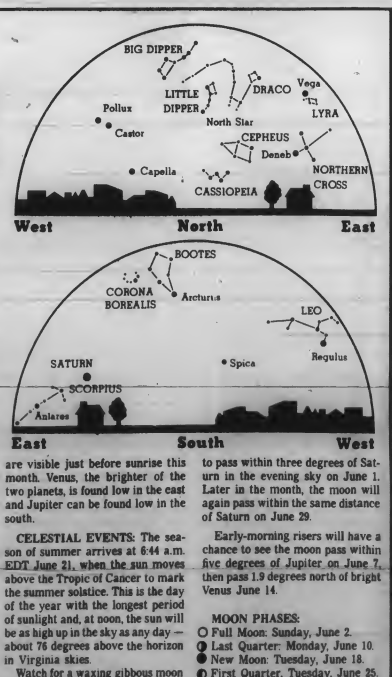

This is the first time city employees are being offered insurance by HMO's.

Regardless of the health plan selected by the employee, the dental coverage will be offered by BlueCross/Blue Shield.

Vital record office moving

VIRGINIA BEACH—The Virginia Beach Health Department's office of vital records and health statistics will be relocating to 303 Birchwood Office Park, Post Office Box 8217, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23450. The move became effective this week. The new phone number will be 463-4240.

Any inquiries about births or deaths should be directed to the new location and phone number. The office of vital records and health statistics is currently located at the Virginia Beach Health Department on 19th Street and Arctic Avenue.

NOTICE OF

PUBLIC HEARING

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission will hold a Public Hearing on Tuesday, June 11, 1984, at 12:00 Noon in the Council Chambers of the City Hall Building, Princess Anne Courthouse, Virginia Beach, Virginia. A briefing session will be held at 9:00 a.m. in the Planning Department Conference Room, Operations Building. Planning Commission action is not a final determination of the application, but only a recommendation to the City Council as the viewpoint of the Planning Commission. Final Determination of the application is to be made by City Council at a later date, after public notice in a newspaper having general circulation within the city.

Interested members of the public interested in attending the Public Hearing should be advised that, for reasons the Planning Commission deems appropriate, certain items on the agenda may be heard out of order and that it should not be assumed that the order listed below will be exactly followed during the Public Hearing.

The staff reviews of some or all of the items on this agenda suggest that certain conditions be attached to approval by City Council. However, it should not be assumed that those conditions constitute all the conditions that will ultimately be attached to the project. Staff agencies may impose further conditions and requirements during administration of applicable city ordinances.

TV writer speaks at A.R.E.

Barry Kemp: Life is full of choices

By Cathy LeCompte
Editor

Barry Kemp's humor is subtle, low key, and like the actors he works with, very, very funny.

If you laughed at "Taxi" and are a fan of "Newhart" you know his work. For his writing on those two shows, he earned three Emmy nominations.

Kemp was in Virginia Beach recently to open the first night of lectures for the Association for Research and Enlightenment's conference called, "With a Joyful Spirit."

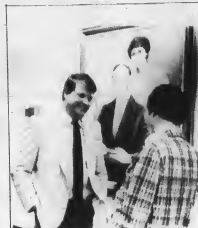

He talked candidly about his experiences in a business that is often ruthless and disillusioning.

"People used to tell me that when you got into this business," Kemp said, "you had to throw your principles out the window. I made a commitment to being in this business and I set down a few rules about the way I would conduct myself."

Kemp said he believes that life is full of choices and making those choices cultivates creativity. He finds he's happiest when making those decisions about his life, rather than letting his life control him.

"Many people avoid making decisions because it's easier to let someone else control your life," Kemp said. "Then if things go wrong, you can blame someone else."

His comedies, "Taxi" and "Newhart" are both thought provoking, but very funny shows. The characters are well developed and decidedly different from one another. Like most writers, the characters he creates are based on people he knows in real life. But these characters are so well crafted, the people whom they are modeled after sometimes can't recognize it.

Barry Kemp at A.R.E.

"I've created characters who are people I know, but I try to make them more universal," he said. "Once I was watching a show with a person whom one of the characters was based on and he said, 'I know people like that,' and I said, 'So do I.'"

Kemp has been writing professionally for eight years. For five years before that though, he worked at what he called "horrible" jobs just to support his family. Living in Phoenix, Ariz., Kemp got up every morning at 4 or 5 a.m., to discipline himself to writing. He would write scripts for his favorite television shows and send them off to productions companies.

"I wanted to show them that I could write good scripts for their shows, so they'd know I watched enough to know what would work," he said.

"I did a lot of jobs just to support my family. Some I did for a week, some for a day. I sold insurance for three years. Don't get me wrong, there's nothing wrong with selling insurance. It's just not for me," Kemp said.

Finally, when his dedication paid off, he was hired by MTM

Proposes tax changes

Walsh announces candidacy

By Cathy LeCompte

VIRGINIA BEACH—Dennis M. Walsh, 38, announced his independent candidacy for the office of Virginia Beach Commissioner of Revenue at a press conference last week at the Virginia Beach Plaza Hotel.

Walsh will oppose Robert P. Vaughan (Dem.) acting Commissioner of Revenue and John R. Griffin (Rep.) in November.

Walsh said his candidacy is spurred by his belief that citizens are dissatisfied with the cost-effectiveness of the present government.

"The recent defeat of the Bond Referendum shows me that the citizens are concerned with having a more effective and cost-efficient government," Walsh said. "With my skills in taxes, budget preparation and budget analysis, I am qualified for the office."

Walsh is a certified public accountant and part-time instructor at Tidewater Community College.

Dennis M. Walsh

In outlining his platform for the Commissioner or Revenue post, Walsh said he would like to implement several cost reduction measures. He said one change involving the mailing of tax bills could save the city approximately $20,000 per year.

"The language on the tax statements should be changed," Walsh said, "so that the option of mailing in the second part for VIRGINIA BEACH—Virginia Supreme Court Chief Justice Harry L. Carrico and Assistant U.S. Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds will be the featured speakers at the 47th Annual Meeting of the Virginia State Bar on June 13-16.

For the third straight year, Chief Justice Carrico will address the annual luncheon at the Cavalier Beach Club on Saturday, June 15, at 1 p.m. Reynolds, who heads the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department, will speak at the same luncheon.

Also on Friday, June 14, fifteen VSB sections will present "Professional Development Workshop" on issues in various fields of law.

The Special Committee on Minority Participation in Bar Activities will present a program on opportunities for women and minorities including the role of women and minority lawyers in court, in bar groups and in large law firms. That program will be on Friday, June 14, at 11 a.m. at the Cavalier Oceanfront.

The Metropolitan Richmond Women's Bar Association, Virginia Women's Attorneys' Association will present a program on opportunities for women and minorities including the role of women and minority lawyers in court, in bar groups and in large law firms. Commission will study direct mayoral election

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

City Council has scheduled the appointment of a local government study commission for next Monday, but the submission of three names as possibilities has already generated controversy.

In fact, Council has not decided how many persons will serve on the committee and which proportions should be members from outside or inside the city.

Council established the commission on April 8, 1985, but doesn't expect any kind of report before Oct. 1.

The commission is to study whether or not the size and organization of City Council should be changed, whether or not the formula for the representation on City Council of geographical areas should be changed, and whether or not the mayor should be elected by City Council or directly by the voters.

The commission was proposed by Councilmen H. Jack Jennings Jr. and Robert G. Jones. They met with opposition from the start, but finally prevailed.

Referring apparently to a discussion during executive session, Jennings said Monday afternoon that he was caught off guard when he heard some members were having concerns. He wants the Council to proceed as originally agreed and to make the appointments next week.

Councilwoman Nancy Creech said that she had initially had a negative reaction to the plan, but now is inclined to move ahead.

Councilman John A. Baum, who also expressed skepticism originally, said that outside people are reluctant to serve on the committee. He said that one fertile ground is former Council members. He suggested Reid Ervin and Patrick L. Standing who both served several terms on City Council.

Seeing it from the road, it looks more like a modernized "Shady Rest Hotel." And even once inside, the high ceilings and huge windows that line most of the walls make you feel like you're in a country chalet.

At Virginia Beach Orthopaedic Associates and The Sports Medicine and Hand Surgery Center, quaint surroundings meet high technology to provide the most up-to-date patient care.

Dr. Robert W. Waddell, director of the Center, said the architecture is done with one purpose in mind.

"When we decided to move here, we promised our neighbors that we wouldn't build the usual two-story, brick office building," he said. "So when we picked out the plans for this place, we had the quiet residential area in mind."

From its pale gray exterior paint to the white front porch, to the blue interior motif, the Center spells relaxation to its patients. Waddell said the patients like what they see.

"The most common response we've gotten is, 'This doesn't look like a doctor's office,'" he said.

The Virginia Beach Orthopaedic Associates office located on Old Donation Parkway has been open since January. The construction is, for the most part, completed. There are still a few cosmetic things left to be done.

"We need to paint a few walls and paint the rest of the porch," Waddell said, "but we're almost there."

Patients don't seem to mind that some of the walls aren't painted. Since January, the Center has seen over 15,000 patients at the Old Donation office and their two other offices on Witchduck and Holland roads combined.

The Center has several areas of expertise. They do sports medicine, physical therapy, general hand surgery, outpatient surgery, and are even equipped with an orthopaedic urgent care facility.

"We think our urgent care facility is unique," Waddell said. "We're the only place in the area for emergency orthopaedic care."

A first-class citizen

Skip Wilkins is everything a First Citizen of Virginia Beach should be: strong, intelligent, compassionate, courageous. He is a published author, an articulate lecturer, an award-winning athlete.

The June 14, 1967 water skiing accident that left him paralyzed could have dealt a mightier blow. It could have broken his spirit, but it didn't. Skip Wilkins is different. His disability has made him stronger. He's not satisfied with a life that passes him by.

Skip's message to us is simple: have faith in yourself. The Virginia Beach Jaycees present the First Citizen Award to a person who gives of himself and who advances the city by helping others.

It is clear that Skip Wilkins is their man. He gave from his heart at a time when it would have been easier to build walls around himself. And he keeps on giving.

One doesn't need to look far to find a man to emulate. We can be proud to have him right here in our city.

Congratulations, Skip!—C.L.

Tribute to Grandpa

During the summers of my childhood when we went to visit our grandparents, my brother and I shared Grandpa's life.

We usually tended the garden in the morning. Grandpa, born an Italian farmer, knew the perfect mix of soil, manure, seed, water, and sunshine. He always had more tomatoes and beans than he and Grandma and the six families of his sons and daughters, with all eighteen of their children, could use.

Occasionally Grandpa took us to work in the yard of the house he rented out. We sweated those mornings, pushing that heavy reel mower through the thick grass, trimming around bushes and alongside the house with shears that were too big and heavy for us. When we needed a break, Grandpa sent us climbing for the ripest plums and the brightest cherries.

We loved our days alone with Grandpa, but we also enjoyed sharing him with the entire family.

I normally see Grandpa two or three times a year now. When I visit him at home, the two of us spend a few quiet hours. We start all of our visits in his kitchen, the most important room in an Italian household, where we share Stella D'oro and vermouth, which has replaced the lemonade, and peel figs he has grown. Last Thanksgiving he showed me the letter the mayor wrote to thank him for his 25 years of service to Albany. I usually read him some cards from his other grandchildren, now scattered like dandelion seeds from California through Texas and even to England. We once carried about three dozen of the plaster figures, which he makes to sell in the park, from the bathtub to the cellar, and he picked out two perfect Praying Hands for me. We watch television, talking about his cat, his new car, the changes in the neighborhood, his citation from the Italian king for serving in the calvary. And Grandpa and I always play checkers. I don't normally have much luck: he lets me win only one game per visit.

Last year, during one of our visits, Grandpa gave me a young fig tree to raise. I have it in my kitchen, and it reminds me how simple life really is. Like that fig tree, Grandpa refuses to worry whether living is hard or easy; he draws life from the earth and bears fruit, as best he can, for as long as the good Lord intends.—Anthony F. Chiffolo

Letters To The Editor

Improve military medical service

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Regarding the spate of articles reporting military medical malpractice—as one ex-spouse who benefitted from Senator Trible's ex-military spouse health care bill, I can compare military medicine to what it was ten years ago (best in the world) when I was divorced and lost my privileges, to what I regrettably have found it to be recently.

Unfortunately, I have discovered it to be almost impossible to get in to see over-worked and harassed doctors because I have to line up behind so many "freeloaders". Who are these freeloaders who are entitled to military medicine at public expense who have no right to it? They are women who married military members after the military members retired from the service, and children of theirs by previous marriages. They never served as military wives, and the public has absolutely no obligation to furnish free medical care to this category of people. These freeloaders are ruining military medicine for those of us who earned the privilege by serving our country on active duty for many years. Why should the public pay at least $1500 per person per year to people whose only connection with the national defense is through a personal relationship with a retired military member? Why should a marriage certificate entitle wives married after a military member retires to free medical care at taxpayer expense?

I write to urge Congress to order a study just to find out what the facts are. I would guess that the swollen military rolls are the main reason we are hearing such horror stories about military medicine. But if I am wrong, surely a study would set the record straight.

Why has Congress been derelict in its duty to pass laws that make public benefits dependent on public service? Why has Congress been derelict in its duty even to study the problem? Something must be done to improve military medicine or the security of the United States could be threatened. The first step is to know the facts, Congress.

Yours truly,
Gerline Runyon

Love a good mystery?

Whenever I learn of a mystery that is in any way connected with the world of books, I want to read it. Often I discover a fascinating book; when I am very fortunate, I discover an entire series. Richard Forrest's catchy titles, all parodies of children's classics, first attracted my attention: The Death at Yew Corner, The Death in the Willows, Death Through the Looking Glass, The Wizard of Death, A Child's Garden of Death, and Death Under the Lilacs. His series characters, their relationships, and, of course, the mystery at the center of each story, have held my interest.

Lyon Wentworth, Forrest's sleuth, is a successful writer of children's books featuring the benignly monstrous Wobblies. Bea Wentworth, Lyon's wife, is an influential Connecticut state senator. Their mature relationship is characterized both by love and considerable respect. Lyon's friend Rocco, the local police chief, and Bea's friend and aide, Kim, often help the Wentworths. While Forrest's mysteries require the Wentworths to investigate everything from political assassination and organized crime to murders station wagon is the only sign that she has ever been there. Chief Rocco, immediately suspecting foul play, organizes a search, but nothing can be done until Lyon hears from the kidnapper.

Books

By Donna Gant

motivated by simple greed or revenge, one element is always present—Lyon's hobby. Lyon is a hot-air balloonist. At a critical point in each novel, Lyon takes to the skies to chase a culprit or to seek an important clue visible only from the air.

In Death Under the Lilacs, the latest mystery featuring the Wentworths, Lyon climbs into his balloon basket for a dangerous race with death. Bea has disappeared from the grocery store parking lot; the cart of food standing next to the Wentworth's

As the scene flashes from an anxious Lyon, working with the police, to Bea and the kidnapper, the tension mounts. When the kidnapper finally calls, he has Bea speak to Lyon. She begs him to do what the kidnapper asks so she can get home to take care of her lilacs. Lyon recognizes this as a clue—Bea hates lilacs so much that she has torn up their. The meaning of the clue, though, eludes Lyon until it is almost too late for Bea, who is being held, chained, in a sealed crypt.

Old Forrest fans will enjoy learning more about the Wentworths in Death Under the Lilacs; old and new readers will enjoy a well-plotted mystery that has plenty of suspense and interesting, well developed series sleuths.

Introducing...

Hi folks!

As you've probably noticed, we're having a "change of command" here at The Virginia Beach Sun. Sam Martinette said his farewells last week, to go back into the book editing business. He stayed long enough to give me a few days intense training, and then off he went. This is what's known as the "jump right in and get your feet wet method."

Allow me to introduce myself. You'll find my name prominently displayed in several places throughout the paper (or at least you're supposed to, I put it there myself). In fact, it's right down here in the middle of this column, in that bold print. Looks kind of nice there, doesn't it? Don't worry if you can't figure out how to pronounce it, very few people can first. Yes, the last name is French, and no, my first name isn't Cathleen or Catherine, just Cathy.

It's kind of scary, starting a new job like this, especially the responsibility of putting out a weekly newspaper in Virginia's most populous city. I have nightmares about being carried away by huge piles of mail, or falling into a pit of paste-up wax.

Seriously though, I do spend a lot of time thinking about doing this job. I have my own ideas about what I want this paper to be, but I still need your help.

I need to know what you think the mission of this paper is. I want to hear from the regular Sun readers and from the people who only pick up the Sun occasionally, because I want to turn you into devout readers. I need to know what you think is important for me to cover.

Ed's notes

By Cathy LeCompte

In essence, this is your paper. What's important to you is important to me.

The Sun has been in the capable hands of Sam Martinette for over a year. I believe he has earned your trust and your readership. And it's my goal to do the same. I hope to make this paper something you look forward to reading each week.

Maybe it would be a good idea to tell you a little bit about myself, so we can start off this working relationship.

I grew up in a small town on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, near the resort town of Ocean City. Although I lived about 45 minutes away from O.C., I still made quite a few visits to the town while I was growing up. So you see, I'm no stranger to the ocean, or the tourist trade, or boardwalks, or surfing, or any of the other things that make resort cities boom.

I graduated from Old Dominion University last year. After four years of school here and another year working here, I consider myself a five-year resident of the Tidewater area.

I'm an avid Baltimore Orioles fan and a part-time softball player. Baseball is one of the few areas where I will not tolerate opposing viewpoints. The Orioles are the best and that's that! Please, no letters to the editor on the subject of baseball.

One thing I would appreciate your input on is what to call my column. Sam called his "Ed's Notes" and I used it for this issue simply because I haven't been able to come up with anything. "Ed's Notes" is O.K., but I'm afraid I'll start getting mail addressed to Ed LeCompte.

So far, I've had one suggestion to call it "Grinding My Ax." Personally, I don't think it fits me, but the person who made the suggestion assures me that it does. I really don't know what to call it, so any ideas will at least be considered for a second or two.

So let me hear from you. If you have a suggestion, or a letter to the editor, or just a general complaint or story idea, I'll be happy to talk with you. If I'm not here the first time you call, don't give up. I'm just out there trying to dig up news!

Eight years in show business

Productions, and was one of the few writers to sign a contract to do a particular show.

"They hired a lot of writers, but they signed me right away," he said.

Kemp grew up in Iowa, attending the University of Iowa, which he said, at the time had a poor playwrighting department.

"I was the only person taking the graduate level playwrighting class," he said, "so it was just the professor and me. I would write plays and he would critique them."

Kemp's family was influential and supportive in his career in a very different way than most. He came from a long line of businessmen who couldn't seem to understand someone wanting to write for a living.

"They (family) were in the influence because they kept saying 'can't' and I kept saying, 'I can.'"

"I wrote a letter to a friend once and I was so proud of it, so I read it to my mother," he said. "It had all kinds of jokes in it and I thought it was so good. After I was done reading it to her, she just looked at me and said, 'Barry, why do you always have to be funny.'"

Kemp considers himself lucky to have been able to work with so many good actors. Among the best is his current cohort, Bob Newhart.

"Bob is so easy going and fun to work with. We got along from the first moment," he said.

Writing and producing a hit comedy series is probably a mystery to most people. The writers and actors gather around a table on Monday morning to go over the script. The writers are there to answer any questions that might come up about why a certain character says what he does, or how a certain scene should be played. Tuesday through Thursday are the "run-through" days where the actors learn their lines and practice the script. On these days, the writers are on hand to do rewrites of scenes and lines that don't work. Then on Friday, "Newhart" is taped before a live audience of about 300 people.

Kemp thinks it is essential for comedy to be done before a live audience.

"That's really the way we know it's working," he said. "If you have 300 people sitting there quiet, not laughing, you know you've got a problem."

During college, Kemp also studied acting. Although it wasn't his first love, he thinks it helped him as a writer to have stage experience.

"I hated the whole process of acting, not the being onstage part or the applause, but everything leading up to that," he said, chuckling. "But with writing, it's different for me. I love the whole process."

"I'm a better writer because I can write with the actor in mind. I can write in terms of what I think he's capable of."

Kemp is now working on a musical based on the true story of the Neiman-Marcus department store chain in Texas. He says writing the musical is a very different experience.

"I've never written something based on a true story," he said. "It's also difficult to adjust to writing up to a dramatic point that is then sung and done musically, rather than with dialogue."

In a business that can consume people, Barry Kemp has managed to stay aloof because of his unwaivering principles. He promised himself that his work would always mean something and that the people who employed him would get their money's worth.

And maybe most of all, where his writing is concerned, he has never sacrificed quality. "I'll choose to do stories about the human condition," he said. "I don't have to expose big, important truths all the time, they can be little truths."

Kemp says that because he has always made the important decisions himself, he feels no regret for the ones that didn't work.

"I have no regrets for the few times that my philosophy of life failed me."

Rezoning questioned

McClanan's outburst, the application had a good chance of passing. In fact, Lynnhaven Borough Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. said that he had been ready to move for approval because both the Planning Staff and Planning Commission recommended approval after finding the application compatible with the Comprehensive Land Use Plan. Also the staff's background report said that the roads were adequate to handle the traffic.

The application was opposed by residents of Princess Anne Plaza, Windsor Woods and Doyletown who turned in petitions with more than 1,000 signatures.

After McClanan revealed the dated figures, Council voted 10-0 to defer the application until July 1, instructing the staff to make a current traffic count and also to determine the amount of land which is in the flood plain and therefore not to be completed for density.

Present zoning permits the development of up to 180 single-family or duplex dwelling units while the A-2 zoning would permit up to 540 multi-family units. That number would be decreased depending on the amount of flood plain.

McClanan's remarks were branded political by Grover Wright, attorney representing Lynnhaven, while he, in turn was called down by Councilwoman Nancy Creech for accusing a Council member of acting from political motives.

Councilman Robert G. Jones took McClanan's remarks as supportive of what he's been saying all along about the Comprehensive Plan and the Master Street and Highway Plan. "I don't feel at all constrained by what the Comprehensive Plan says," he said. Picking up a statement from the staff's remarks, he said that a moderate increase in density is permitted, but questioned why an increase from six units to 18 units should be considered moderate. "That's a 300 percent increase," he said.

A tree for all seasons

River Birch is a lovely, graceful native tree frequently found in the wild along river banks but often overlooked in favor of its more famous cousin, the Paper-white Birch. While all the birches provide a narrow, slender silhouette to the landscape, River Birch is the best for the hot, dry climate of Hampton Roads and thrives on our slightly acidic soils. It is unusually tolerant of wet conditions, but will survive drier soils where other birches would eventually succumb to lack of moisture.

River Birch (also called Red Birch) is a choice landscape tree throughout the year, valued highly for its handsome exfoliating (peeling) bark. Planted against a background of evergreens, it creates an elegant winter picture of silvery bark against dark green foliage. Come spring, fresh, bright green leaves wake up the garden. All summer, River Birch provides dappled shade which creates a moving pattern of sunlight and shade. This results in a fairly bright situation without long periods of direct hot sun which allows for a wide choice of companion plantings.

With the arrival of autumn, leaves turn a clear, pure gold. Valued for different reasons during different seasons—River Birch's best feature is its bark and it offers year round interest. Young bark is auburn colored maturing to ivory and peeling off to reveal the inner bark which varies from white to cinnamon to salmon to various shades of red-dish brown. 'Heritage' is a new patented introduction with bark the closest to white and thrives in hot climates. River Birch is best when grown as a multi-stemmed specimen offering 3 or 4 trunks of exquisite exfoliating bark. Stop by McDonald Garden Center and become acquainted with this horticultural favorite. Planting a River Birch in your garden gives you a beautiful reason to enjoy every season!

Councilman Robert Fentress said he would like to have George Baker considered.

Councilman Louis R. Jones said that he had reservations about having the majority of members from outside the city.

Jones said that ultimately the study will come out with a recommendation for the direct election of mayor "and not much else." He said the people should be assured that the issue of a direct election of mayor will not be on the November referendum.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberdorf said that she supported the resolution originally although she had strong reservations. She pointed out that the State of Virginia is still being monitored by the federal government under the Voting Rights Act. She said she would like qualified election lawyers to guide the city in any changes. Richmond is in a situation, she said, where it cannot have elections for six years and Williamsburg also is having election problems because of the recent merger.

Oberdorf wants the Commission members to be extremely scholarly. She also brought up the issue of a possible recommendation for merging cities, which she said, is totally opposed to.

Jennings said, "if I thought for one minute this commission was going to come close to a merger, I would be opposed because I'm ultimately opposed."

R. Jones said that his preference was to get people on the Commission of diverse points of view.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley said she was not in favor of the study "because I've got a lot of concern that the decisions are already being made. I heard names that weren't 'unpolitical.'"

The idea was brought up by a newspaper, Baum said. "We can't work together on Council let alone with the next city."

Beach Rotary sponsors Interact Club

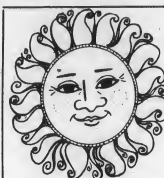

The Virginia Beach Rotary Club sponsored an Interact Club at First Colonial High School, the first club in Hampton Roads. There are 4,763 Interact Clubs with a membership of 104,192 in 82 countries.

First Colonial High School students elected officers for the 1985-86 in May: President, Andy Kee; Vice President, Jennifer Cooke; Secretary, Valerie David; Treasurer, Mike Tyrrell; Directors, Chris Ogle, Mark Newsome and Ryan Bosch. The president Andy Kee is the son of a Rotarian, Bill Kee, in the Cape Henry Rotary Club and also is the grandson of a Rotarian.

Like Rotary, Interact is a service club. It is not an exclusive club, however. The most important credential is that a person wants to join and become part of a lively group involved in promoting international understanding and serving the community. Interact began in 1962 with the first club initiated by the Rotary Club of Melbourne, FLA. Each Interact Club is self-governing and self-supporting. The clubs are sponsored by Rotary Clubs which provide advisors and work with others to whom the club has obligations, for example school authorities. Interact Clubs are governed by a constitution and by by-laws prescribed by Rotary International. Even the name, Interact, is a combination of the English words "International" and "Action".

All Interact Clubs work on different projects to accomplish the same thing—meeting human needs. While one club in Nairobi, Kenya, is transplanting banana trees on the grounds of a home for disabled children, another club in Hong Kong is wrapping presents for a Christmas party for handicapped children and a third is cutting a road through a swamp in India. Meanwhile, an American Interact Club is holding a carnival to raise funds for a program that helps rehabilitate young drug addicts.

President of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club, John Fahey, credits Interact committee chairman Geary Crist, Rotarian and School Board member James Fletcher, and Rotarian and Assistant Superintendent Carlton Boywer with the work and effort to organize the First Colonial High School Interact Club. Fahey said, "It's projects like this that led District 760 Governor Bernard H. Zeavin of Alexandria, VA to choose the Virginia Beach Rotary Club as the best club in the district."

Beach General appoints Meyer

Kay Meyer

VIRGINIA BEACH—Kay Meyer has been named director of volunteer services at Virginia Beach General Hospital by hospital president, W. Earl Willis.

Meyer, a Virginia Beach resident, was formerly sales administrator for Fidelity Financial Systems, Inc. in Virginia Beach. Her experience also includes public relations work with Virginia Beach Federal Savings & Loan, director of volunteer services at Chesapeake General Hospital, and program coordinator with the Retired Senior Volunteer Program in St. Cloud, Minn.

She is a member of the advisory board of the adult studies program at Virginia Wesleyan College and secretary of the U.S. Air Force Academy parents club of southeastern Virginia.

As director of volunteer services, Meyer is responsible for developing and coordinating programs for over 300 men and women volunteers at the hospital.

Beach residents receive appointments

NORFOLK—Two new appointments have been made in Old Dominion University's Office of Academic Affairs.

Effective July 1, Dr. Daniel Sonenshine will succeed Dr. William Dunstan as associate vice president for research and Dr. Lindsay Rettie will succeed Dr. Gordon Buhrer as associate vice president for academic and financial affairs.

An eminent professor of biological sciences, Sonenshine will continue to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the research and sponsored programs offered as the university's research program expands, said Dr. Thomas P. Wallace, vice president of academic affairs.

In her new position, Rettie, associate dean of the School of Sciences and Health Professions, will be responsible for planning budgets, monitoring resources, preparing budget documents and working with budget directors.

In addition, Wallace said, Rettie will chair the Public Service Advisory Committee and assume a leadership role in off-campus credit and non-credit programming. Rettie will also work toward developing telecourse capabilities for the university's continuing education programs.

Both Sonenshine and Rettie reside in Virginia Beach.

Private psychiatric practice adds 3 to staff

Lindsay C. Gibson

Psychiatric Associates of Tidewater, Inc. (PAT) was one of the first private psychiatric practices established in Tidewater. PAT was founded in 1970 by seven psychiatrists practicing independently in Norfolk and Virginia Beach. Since then PAT has grown to more than thirty mental health professionals, including psychiatrists, clinical psychologists and clinical social workers, with eight locations in Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Suffolk and Franklin.

Providing a high level of professional care and diversity of service, PAT offers comprehensive evaluation and treatment for children, adolescents, and adults. Services for individuals, couples, families and groups are available, as well as special programs for business, industry, government and the community.

The following women see people in individual family and group therapy, each being an expert in a particular area.

Susan L. Brown, L.C.S.W., earned her M.S.W. degree from Case Western Reserve University. Her training took place at Metropolitan General Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio and the Akron, Ohio Children's Hospital. A licensed clinical social worker, Brown was previously employed by Tidewater Psychiatric Institute in Virginia Beach. Her expertise is with adolescents in family therapy, and she is especially interested in issues and concerns related to adolescence.

Lindsay C. Gibson, Psy. D., earned a B.A. degree from Mary Washington College, an M.A. degree from Central Michigan University and a Psy. D. degree from the Virginia Consortium for Professional Psychology. She is a Licensed Clinical Psychologist who previously practiced with Center Psychiatric. Gibson's expertise is in the area of psychological testing and evaluation. She has special interests in identity issues, marital problems, and physical and sexual abuse.

Gloria K. Gurdziel, M.D., graduated from Smith College and Tufts University Medical School. Her training in child and adult psychiatry was at the New England Medical Center in Boston, and the Children's Hospital in Cincinnati. She is a Board Certified Psychiatrist who previously practiced in Cincinnati, Ohio. Gurdziel's areas of interest include depression and agoraphobia.

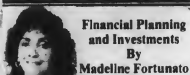

The women's offices are located in the PAT office at 1020 First Colonial Road.

Plan for "Golden Years"

Today, perhaps more than ever, most Americans are enjoying the luxury of "the good life." With dual incomes, families have the opportunities to enjoy spacious homes and family vacations. Most people today spend more time planning for their family's vacation or a dinner party than they do planning for their family's financial security.

Out of every 100 people, only two are financially independent at age 65. It's not that they plan to fail, they fail to plan. It's important to have a plan to accumulate funds and conserve estates, and a plan that will benefit both spouses at retirement, and the survivor should meet with a financial planner, attorney, accountant, or trust officer to review the couple's financial goals. This would eliminate the questions that begin "What if?" Details of the investments and insurance needs should be explained and if already implemented, reviewed to be sure they suit both spouses' temperaments.

The tax ramifications could be analyzed and the legal documents discussed, reviewed, or established. Most people do not have a current will.

The Marital Deduction, a part of estate planning and an important part of a complete financial plan, is a deduction allowed from the gross estate for interests in property which pass from a decedent to a surviving spouse.

Beach legal secretary earns certification

Linda C. Johnson has recently been certified by the National Association of Legal Secretaries as a Professional Legal Secretary (PLS). Linda C. Johnson is employed by Jeremiah A. Denton, III.

Johnson is only the second person in the Virginia Beach area to pass the exam.

The Professional Legal Secretary examination consists of seven parts: written communication skill and knowledge; human relations and ethics; legal secretarial procedures; legal secretarial accounting; legal terminology, techniques and procedures; exercise of judgment; and legal secretarial skills.

The Professional Legal Secretary examination was first administered in 1960, and since then 1,768 legal secretaries have been certified as PLSs.

Most people don't plan to fail, they fail to plan the choice is yours!

With 15 years experience as a financial planner you settle for anything but the best.

Fresh pasta prevails on Atlantic Avenue at the all new Cafe 21 at the beach. There's no longer a BELLE RIVE, but a super no frills, more-or-less Italian restaurant with heads up service and incomparably delicious food. The new owners have created a great little atmosphere in one of Virginia Beach's once less salubrious locations—where factory produced spaghetti was the only pasta on "the strip." With the exception of cured olives everything at the 21 is home-made or grown...including the fresh basil, tomatoes, and soon to be ripe eggplant. All cheeses are fresh and freshly grated. The pasta is cranked immediately upon

Though all dishes don't conform to generic Italian breakfasts, desserts, etc. are ever changing the affection for good, family-style service and menu volatility keep things exciting. Those who drift in late get the same reassuring service. Full portions are served for as little as $4.95. 17th ST. CAFE

When you think of sidewalk cafes, quaint bars, friendly people... 17th St. Virginia Beach offers this variety—from refreshing stop overs from shopping the strip to an afternoon or evening of bar hopping...it's the place for a real taste of Virginia Beach.

What's the taste of Virginia Beach? Most would say fresh local seafood...fresh fish, shrimp, oysters, natively prepared...These are always the feature at the non-descript 17th St. Cafe, under new ownership by Linda and Larry Reinhold, native Virginia Beachers and Pungo residents. The SUN visited its open and airy location and during an earnest conversation, Linda spoke freely—"We want to offer the same quality of food we'd serve in our home." Not only is the management "quality concerned" but personally interested in product selection. "Like the steaks and burgers for instance" comments Linda on her first introduction to institutional food supply, "if it wasn't just right I wouldn't want to sell it...not that it was fast food—but it looked like something you'd eat in a restaurant."

The 17th St. Cafe doesn't offer the quasi-continental style of most Virginia Beach's tonier restaurants. Steamed and raw seafood remain the specialty—the most popular ticket being s-t-e-a-m-e-d shrimp. Entrees range from Steak Du Jour to Pasta Dishes, Broiled and Fried Seafood Dinners. All fried seafood is f-a-s-t but freshly breaded. Larry is No. 1 chef, and prepares an outstanding Shrimp Scampi served with linguine, salad and garlic bread for $7.95; similarly, fresh scallops. The Veggie listing includes home-made cafe slaw and corn-on-the-cob (in season).

In keeping with the 17th St. theme burgers, sandwiches, fries and assorted beers are available to quench the all American appetite. In addition to cozy booths and table arrangements a long open bar accommodates casual cocktails and dining...right at the beach.

As the oceanfront hosts the top-tier summer season 17th St. prevails as host...and Cafe remains open 12-2 with good cookin', company, even a little dancing (there is a jukebox in the bar, by the way)—and a down home spirit. Frequented by locals; savored by tourists. Key West style, you might say...bare feet or flip flops are O.K. CSR

at the Howard Johnson Oceanfront

"View from the top"

—We want the locals to feel welcome—to call for reservations and know they'll be paid special attention to—

"Our frosty frozen drinks are as exciting as the alliteration...if we don't have your favorite...you can create your own!" — Bob Vollrath

Bob Lowry - Charleys - General Manager

CHARLEYS, a new synonym for dining in Virginia Beach is about to open its doors...to an elegant brownstone foyer encircled with etched and stained glass...and more 'french' doors...open to formal dining. A brass enrailed central bar and interior street lights are centerpiece to a softly curved open seating area for casual dinners, appetizers, drink...all to suit your every whim.

And like the earlybird construction work force now busy to complete every new detail, CHARLEYS will soon be open for breakfast...with the identical panache and service only the handful of these unique theme restaurants have perfected.

It was the instant success of the Danville location, No. 3 in the chain and the first to be housed by Southeastern, the Howard Johnson ownership, that evoked interest (simultaneously to two North Carolina openings) at the 37th Street and Atlantic address. Oddly enough for a hotel where fish practically leap in schools from the oceanfront—where fine seafood is the local specialty—where local clientele have been exposed to a myriad of restaurants—CHARLEYS opens their restaurant No. 6. But according to General Manager Robert E. Lowry it came as no surprise, because it takes a long time to develop a mastery of cuisine and environment and Bob contends that CHARLEYS has the unique culinary key...a way to escape the monotony of regular dining out.

"The philosophy of CHARLEYS", according to Bob, of a previous three year association with Colonial Williamsburg, "is the ability to have a tavern like dining yet the ability to have a formal environment but the food is the same throughout. All dishes are prepared by recipe. The lunch through dinner menu stays the same. The quality and the price doesn't fluctuate. The diner that wants to go out regularly and doesn't want to spend $8-13 for dinner has the opportunity to order a lunch priced but dinner sized item." The CHARLEYS multi-level dining theme offers environment change without restriction in cuisine. The food displays and menu selection is diverse...from a Veal St. Charles, Beef Wellington...to a Quiche Lorraine. Bob accounts that all dishes are prepared by recipe and dinner specialties will be ever changing.

CHARLEYS, No. 6 will also have an extensive wine list. States Bob, "Because you have to vary to meet your culture, we'll stock 55 different varieties. We're here to be competitive—to cover the full expanse from elegant Bordeaux...to Virginia wines.

The creation of miniature environments within one restaurant is obviously a time consuming and costly process. All CHARLEYS employees undergo a 10 day training regimen in a classroom like environment. Being honestly aware of the interest of the people...that's our guideline. If you take time to teach them well, the attitude becomes contagious."

Bob has made strategic choices from his restaurant staff selection to include Bob Vollrath of the Roanoke CHARLEYS, bar and creative drink manager, Mike Shipley, Kitchen Manager, Dennis Kimmerle and Julie Russell, Managers, to perfect timing and marketing techniques.

Entertainment? Opening the 20th is the CHARLEYS Dinner Theatre—"theatre in the round" with seated full dinners, cocktails prior and during the show. Featuring seven different plays every Thursday-Sunday. "We will be using all local talent...we want the local people to know we're here for them." And CHARLEYS recently displayed their local enthusiasm with sponsorship in the Miss Virginia Beach Pageant and has been announced the host of the 1986 pageant.

"We want the locals to feel welcome here—to call for reservations and know they will be paid attention to...we're not here to be pretentious—we're just providing as much as we can so that people can be whatever they want to be in our restaurant."

"Uniquely enough you can do just that...from creating your own pizza—a new specialty idea where you create your own recipe and it's served in a special CHARLEYS ceramic skillet—a late nite menu feature. Dinner specialties will be available. Small and large group banquet facilities for 5 to 150 with the same tasteful concern prevails. Even a CHARLEYS Frosty and Frozen drink menu. If they don't have your favorite concoction...you can create it...your own. But CHARLEYS is not here to become a beach bar - IT'S A DINING ESTABLISHMENT ON ALL DIFFERENT LEVELS. Opening soon to satisfy your every whim. CSR

Hangar ministry

This chaplain knows about flying

By JO2 Katie Clark
Special To The Sun
NAS OCEANA, VIRGINIA BEACH—"We work for one hour on Sunday mornings and that's all," joked Navy Lieutenant Coy Newton, Naval Air Station Oceana's newest chaplain. "No, not really, but that's what people sometimes think," he headed.

Chaplain Newton spends his afternoons in hangar 404 in a test program. "The purpose of putting a chaplain in the hangar is to make a chaplain more accessible to the men and women in their workplace," he explained. Military personnel, separated from a network of relatives, family and friends, have special needs and the chaplains are there to support those individuals and provide a network for them.

Counseling and visitation take up the vast majority of Chaplain Newton's time in the hangar. Sometimes using a network of agencies including Navy Family Advocacy, Family Services Center, the Red Cross, he helps individuals reach their goals and work out their problems. Often, the answer is just knowing where to turn in case of a specific problem.

Newton entered the Air Force when he was 18 years-old and, three years later, he became a Christian. "I accepted Jesus as my Lord and my savior," said Chaplain Newton. "It was a very dramatic change in my life. I looked around and saw many young people who were at the age where they really had a lot of spiritual needs," he added. After leaving the Air Force, he attended college and two years later was called into the ministry. "The vision I had for being a chaplain and working with young people just grew," said Newton. After college and three years of seminary, he pastored for two years and then entered the Navy.

Spending the first part of his day at the Chapel of the Good Shepherd, Chaplain Newton assists the senior chaplain and prepares for Sunday worship. A Friday night home fellowship that meets twice-a-month, and various other ongoing chapel programs.

As a Navy chaplain, Chaplain Newton may be called upon to deliver invocations and benedictions during command ceremonies. Aside from counseling, he must be ready to accompany a casualty assistance officer to notify a family of a servicemember's death. He is available for pre-deployment briefs for spouses to familiarize them with accessible resources. He provides details on chapel programs during command indoctrination courses.

Each chaplain who comes into the Navy represents his faith group. There are approximately 80 different Protestant denominations; LT Newton is one of two Protestant chaplains representing the Four-square Gospel Church. However, he ministers to the entire congregation while maintaining his denominational connection.

The Navy Chaplain Corps is unique in that, while the Army and Air Force chaplains serve only their respective services, Navy chaplains serve the Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and Merchant Marines.

"To me, being spiritual not only means coming to church and sitting down on Sunday mornings, it means getting involved with people's lives and getting to know them. If you want to love people, you have to know them personally," shares Chaplain Newton about his hangar ministry.

Summer Sunday entertainment

The Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation is sponsoring a series of concerts called "Summer Sundays on the Beach." This Sunday, June 16, the entertainment is provided by the Naval Amphibious Base - Little Creek School of Music Jazz Band. The concert starts at 7:30 p.m. at the Norwegian Lady Plaza, 25th Street and the Oceanfront.

On Sunday, June 30, the U.S. Atlantic Fleet 4 - Star Edition Band will perform at 7:30 p.m., also at the Norwegian Lady.

All concerts are free and open to the public.

What do you have in common with a Dutch* exchange student?

You both speak the same language.

One of the most exciting things about opening your home to a European high school student from Educational Foundation for Foreign Study is sharing each other's world - in English. With EFFS there is no language barrier, because every one of our students speaks English in addition to his native language. And EFFS removes other barriers as well, all students are thoroughly screened, have full insurance coverage and their own spending money... and you don't have to have children to host a student. So there's nothing standing between you and this very special friendship.

Call us before June 21st and discover how you can host a European student.

validation would be eliminated. We would inform the taxpayers that the second part is their receipt.

Walsh said his experience as an accountant, rather than as a politician, has prepared him for the job.

"As an accountant, people come to me asking how to reduce their taxes," he said. "And I know how to do that."

Another change Walsh said that he would recommend is that the city consider a centralized computer system for handling personal property taxes. He suggested a system shared by the four cities of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake, and Virginia Beach.

"The data that is used to assess taxes on cars and trucks is the same for all the cities," Walsh said. "Finding the value of a car or truck comes from the National Auto Dealers Association. That information could be stored in a central computer with access from the four cities."

Walsh lives in the Red Mill Farms area of Virginia Beach with his wife Margaret, son Dennis, 3, and daughter, Noelle, 14 months.

Association and Virginia State Bar will co-sponsor a coffee reception for all women attorneys from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., on June 14, at the Cavalier Beach Club.

Lawyers will see the latest in computer-assisted legal research at a program entitled "User Comparisons of LEXIS and WESTLAW" presented by the Virginia Lawyer User Group on June 14.

Forty-five lawyers will be honored as 50 year members of the legal profession on Saturday, June 15 at Cavalier Oceanfront. The governing Council of the State Bar will convene for a business meeting on June 13, at 9 a.m., in the Cape Henry Room of the Holiday Inn. The new officers of the 18,000-member State Bar will be elected on Saturday, June 15, at 11:45 a.m., in the Coral Reef Room of the Cavalier.

This is the eighth consecutive year the Virginia State Bar has held its Annual Meeting in Virginia Beach at the Cavalier and Holiday Inn hotels. It is estimated more than 1,400 attorneys, judges, family members and guests will be coming to Virginia Beach for the meeting.

17 merit scholars at Beach

Seventeen graduating seniors in the high schools of Virginia Beach have been named National Merit Scholarship Program finalists. There are about 13,500 finalists in schools throughout the United States; qualification as a finalist makes them eligible for 5,500 undergraduate scholarships totaling over $20 million.

The Virginia Beach finalists are Eric C. Olsson and Andrew C. Stahler of Princess Anne High School; Greg L. Maurer and Kevin M. Tuttle of Bayside High School; Mark E. Harris and Leslie C. Lowe of Cox High School; Stephen J. Gallagher, Michael A. Kares, and Anne L. McClan of First Colonial High School.

Also, Keith P. Griffier, Michael A. Hanna, and Elizabeth D. Matteson of Green Run High School; Corie L. Gochicoa of Kellam High School; and Daniel C. Burnett, Robert A. Dillman, Carolyn A. France, and William L. Murray of Kempville High School.

Another graduating Virginia Beach student, Lionel T. Harris of Bayside High School has won a National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students scholarship of $2,000. While the award is made by a separate organization, it is based in part on the student's score on the PSAT and SAT.

The 17 Virginia Beach students were named semifinalists a year ago, based on their scores on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT). Semifinalist designation is determined on a state allocation; the highest scorers in each state are named. Some 15,000 students nationwide were named as semifinalists a year ago.

To become a finalist, a semifinalist must confirm the results of the PSAT by scoring well on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), must be able to document high academic standing, must be fully endorsed and recommended by the high school principal, and must supply a self-description of activities, interests, and goals.

Merit Scholars are chosen from the list of finalists. Because funds are limited, only about 40 percent actually win awards; however, being a finalist often helps the student gain entrance to many colleges.

$2,000 awards are made, underwritten by business and industrial organizations. Another 1,400 scholarships, renewable up to four years, are awarded to finalists by corporations, and colleges and universities award four-year scholarships of from $250 a year to $2,000 a year to finalists to attend the institution making the award.

In addition, a number of corporations, company foundations, and business and professional associations award one-time or renewable scholarships of $2,000 each.

Dixon elected

VIRGINIA BEACH—L. R. Dixon, administrator of the automotive services division of the City of Virginia Beach, has been elected president of the Tidewater Area Fleet Managers Association for a two-year term.

Association members include auto and truck fleet operations managers in government and industry throughout Hampton Roads. Membership is also open to assistant fleet managers, shop foremen, and shop superintendents. The association's objective is to exchange information relating to the management of fleet operations and resources, and to promote areas of common interest.

Beach libraries offer programs

Beginning the week of June 17, the Virginia Beach Public Libraries will be offering a variety of programs for young people of all ages.

To encourage maintenance of reading skills during the summer months when the children are out of school, the libraries will offer the Summer Reading Club, starting June 17 and run through August. Each child who reads ten books, regardless of category, will receive a certificate.

Sun readers are encouraged to call the nearest library for details: Bayside, 464-9280; Kempville, 495-1016; Great Neck, 481-6094; Oceanfront, 428-4113; Windsor Woods, 340-1043; or the bookmobile at 340-7798.

The local writers discussion group will meet at the Oceanfront Library, Arctic Avenue, at 7 p.m. on Monday, June 17. The meeting will be led by Janet Owens, local author and personality, and a panel discussion will involve the Poets Group. To register and learn more about the program, Sun readers should call 428-4113.

Children ages 3 and up will enjoy the series of movies the library will sponsor starting on Tuesday, June 18 at 11 a.m., at the Oceanfront Library. For a list of movies, call 428-4113.

Movies for older children will be shown at the Great Neck Library, 1251 Bayne Drive, on Wednesday, June 19 at 3 p.m., and also at the Windsor Woods Library on South Plaza Trail, at 10:30 a.m. on June 19. Parents and children should call the specific libraries for information.

Sports medicine is big business

The staff of 43 includes a Registered Physical Therapist (RPT), an athletic trainer, orthopedic surgeons and other specialized personnel.

With the fitness craze of the 80's, came the strong interest in sports medicine. Many more people are participating in athletics of different forms. From aerobics to jogging, from weight lifting to organized team sports, more people are health and fitness conscious than ever before. Waddell noticed the trend about five years ago.

"I've been interested in sports medicine and fitness for a long time," Waddell said. "About five years ago, industry and business got interested in it, too. Instead of allowing their employees a coffee break, the companies installed gyms so the workers could take a fitness break. They found that productivity went way up and absenteeism went down."

To meet the needs of the public's hunger for information about fitness and health, the Virginia Beach Orthopaedic Center is compiling a library of video tapes on subjects that range from an explanation of a total hip replacement operation (a procedure they are equipped to do), to programs about nutrition. The "stars" of these videos are the Center's doctors and staff members.

"I might talk to a patient for 45 minutes about a hip replacement," Waddell said, "but they seem to understand and relax more when they watch these videos."

While only about ten percent of the practice involves sports medicine, Waddell sees the field as an important part of the Center. Paul Versage is an athletic trainer with the Center and is on loan in the afternoons to the Beach schools. He educates those athletes on injury prevention methods and evaluates injuries the competitors might have.

Waddell said he thinks schools are much more involved in athletics than they were ten years ago, and the competition keeps getting tougher. Even on the junior high level, athletes are sustaining injuries that, if untreated, could affect the student for the rest of his life.

"These students could have a lot of problems later in life, stemming from athletic injuries," Waddell said. "If not properly managed and educated, a student with an untreated knee injury, for example, could play with pain from junior high on."

Along with sports medicine, there is now a greater awareness of the benefits of physical therapy to treat athletic and work related injuries. Maybe the most popular benefit, Waddell says, is the way physical therapy can speed up the healing process.

"If we see a construction worker who hurts his back and the normal healing time is three weeks, that's three weeks he can't work," Waddell said. "But if with physical therapy, we can cut that time by one-third or one-half and get that man back on the job, we've saved him money. We're excited about saving patients money."

The Center's physical therapy unit, headed by Kevin Schrack, RPT, has the most modern equipment including whirlpools, ultrasound, electric stimulation and specialized Nautilus equipment.

Schrack said that the use of physical therapy has been so successful, not only because it speeds up the healing process, but also because it cuts down the chances of re-injury.

"If an injury goes untreated, the chances of re-injury or getting a more severe injury are increased," said Schrack. "But with therapy we can strengthen that area and make re-injury less likely."

The physical therapy unit, like the rest of the Center, is very open, pleasing to the eye and most of all, relaxing. Patients can move about the room freely.

One of the most interesting pieces of equipment in the unit is an electric stimulation device. It is used to strengthen muscles by making them contract electrically. It reduces pain and swelling, and can prevent the atrophy of muscles.

For example, a person with a knee injury that has required orthoscopic surgery could not exercise the muscles necessary to strengthen the knee, only three days after surgery. It would be too painful. But with stimulation, the person can sit back and relax while his muscles are contracted by the machine.

A computer system is tucked into one corner of the physical therapy lab. This computer provides one of the vital links in the expert care one can get at the facility.

The computer can read out and store information on patient's muscle strengths throughout a range, and allow the operator to evaluate and compare new information to previously stored data. The computer helps the physical therapy assistants to better evaluate someone's progress, to know when the person is well.

The computer is of special benefit to athletes. An athlete with a muscle injury might go through normal physical therapy and appear to be getting better because he has surpassed what the average person might do. But that athlete is stronger and in better total condition than the average person, so his potential is much higher. Since the computer can measure and record this potential, the doctors can better evaluate his progress.

Beach students get TBA awards

CHESAPEAKE— Tidewater Builders' Association recently awarded scholarships to two Virginia Beach high school seniors.

Sallie Jo Hanbury of Kempsville High School and Sean David Garrison of Bayside High School each received $5,400 scholarships to be used toward four years of undergraduate study at the school of their choice.

The students were selected from more than 130 entrants on the basis of academic ability and financial need.

Hanbury, the daughter of Janice M. Hanbury of 5001 Wellston Court, plans to study political science at Wake Forest University. She is vice president of the thespian society, captain of the debate team and an active participant in a variety of other school-related activities.

Garrison, the son of David and Evelyn Garrison of 1034 Lands End Way, plans to pursue a degree in biomedical engineering at Tulane University. Valedictorian of his high school class, Garrison is president of the Latin and math clubs and plays on the school golf team.

Since 1966, TBA's Scholarship Foundation has awarded scholarships to hundreds of deserving area students. Today, the foundation is one of the largest sources of scholarship funding in Tidewater, awarding more than

The association will continue to provide financial support to five other Virginia Beach students. These students will each receive a $1,350 grant for the 1985-86 academic year. They are: Steven M. DeWitt and Keith Patrick Lowe of the University of Virginia; Shelley Wray Taylor of Old Dominion University; Kelly Ann O'Hara of Virginia Polytechnic and State University; and Judi Lynn Hart of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

TBA is a non-profit trade organization representing more than 10,000 people in the residential construction industry in Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk and Virginia Beach.

Terry campaign makes stop at Beach

By Cathy LeCompte
Sun Editor

VIRGINIA BEACH—Mary Sue Terry, democratic hopeful for the Virginia attorney general position, says the overall issue in this campaign is who is best qualified for the job. She sees a clear choice.

"Despite the fact that the election is over four months away," Terry said, "the issue comes down to who is best qualified for the job." "The attorney general plays a big leadership role in the state and my experiences give me a unique perspective with which to view the office."

Terry was in Virginia Beach for the Virginia State Bar Convention held this weekend at the Cavalier and Holiday Inn Hotels at the oceanfront. She sees the 2nd district as a pivotal place for a candidate to visit.

"Obviously, I need to get to know as many people as I can all over the state," she said. "Virginia Beach and the whole 2nd district is an important place for any candidate."

Terry says she tries to get to this area every two weeks or so to meet as many people as she can.

"Of course I enjoy going to the beach. It's so nice down here," she said. "I want to show people I'm interested in their problems and opportunities."

Terry sees the office of attorney general as being of great benefit to all Virginians, not to the residents of a certain town or district.

Record pace for weddings this month

By Cathy LeCompte
Sun Editor

June, the traditional wedding month is upon us, and so far, couples are tying the knot at a record pace in Virginia Beach.

According to Doris Gregory, deputy clerk of the Circuit Court Clerk's office, couples are running ahead of last year in purchasing wedding licenses.

"We had 457 to apply in May," Gregory said. "Now out of those, we don't know how many are getting married in June."

For $20 cash, a couple can purchase a marriage license and even get married that same day.

"There's no waiting period in the state of Virginia," Gregory said. "Also it's faster now that they did away with the blood tests."

The marriage license is valid for a 60-day period. After 60 days, a couple would need to reapply.

As of June 12, 139 licenses had been issued, and for all of June last year, 353 were purchased.

For those people whose business it is to prepare couples for marriage, June is a popular month.

At Tiffany's Bridal and Formal in Best Square, the activity is getting hot and heavy.

"This is the biggest season we've ever had," said Marinel Wright, manager of Tiffany's for 15 years. "The 22nd of this month is a very big day."

Wright could not quote exact figures on how many weddings they had helped plan, she said, "because we've just been too busy this season for me to compile them."

Because of the variety of services they can offer, Tiffany's seems to be a popular place for "brides-to-be."

Their services include fitting the bride with her entire outfit, renting tuxedos for the groom and groomsmen, printing the necessary invitations and stationery, and even arranging for catering and photography work.

"The only thing we don't have right now is a florist," said Wright. "We try to offer help in every phase of the wedding."

The jewelers who benefit from the couples' wedding bliss, usually do so a few months earlier, when the diamond purchasing takes place.

Stephanie Pair of Spertner Jewelers in Pembroke Mall said that store hadn't noticed any dramatic increases in ring buying for this month.

Bike tour nets $26,000

The 5th Annual Multiple Sclerosis Bike Tour, held June 1 and 2, raised $26,000 for the MS Society, Tidewater Chapter.

"We had an exciting and unique tour this year," said MS coordinator Sharon Emick. "Three people who have multiple sclerosis rode with us."

The 450-mile, two-day tour took the riders to Elizabeth City, N.C. to the United States Coast Guard Base. They returned by roads leading into Chesapeake and finally back into Virginia Beach.

Riders from Maryland, Washington, D.C. and the western part of Virginia also participated.

The event was sponsored by Giant Open Air, 2WD radio station, Cammendale and Chuck Roast Equipment Co.

Officials of the event labeled it "an outstanding success."

Council feuding

Criminations and recriminations extended Monday's City Council session for an hour as one member attacked another on two fronts.

Remarks were fueled by the $3,000 salary increase Council voted for itself and the pros and cons of the city's condemnation powers as discussed in the newspapers.

Councilman John A. Baum directed his remarks to Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf. Oberndorf had voted against the salary increase along with Councilwoman Barbara Henley.

Baum also took issue with her statement reported in the Best Western Northampton Inn to open Friday

VIRGINIA BEACH—The Best Western Northampton Inn announced its grand opening set for Friday, June 21.

The 170-room conference property will be managed by James W. Overton, Jr. Overton is a part-owner of Overton's Markets and served on the Chesapeake City Council from 1960 to 1965.

A written statement submitted by Sallie Hays, sales manager, said "the new conference property will take advantage of its close proximity to I-64, the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel and Norfolk International Airport in catering to both the corporate market and the tour group market..."

The property has eight fully equipped meeting and banquet rooms with a capacity of 300 people; a complete health spa with exercise equipment, a jacuzzi and a sauna; handicapped facilities; and rooms designated for non-smokers.

Best Western International, which owns the hotel, is the world's largest lodging chain, with more than 3,100 properties in 30 countries.

The site of the new Best Western Northampton Inn was purchased by the Overton family in 1976. The Best Western franchise was acquired in 1978.

The old Scottish Inn which occupied the property was gutted and completely renovated starting in the fall of 1984.

Expansion of the property created approximately 70 new jobs.

The exterior of the property is a cluster of four, two-story buildings surrounding a pool and courtyard area.

The Village Green Restaurant and Patio Lounge, located inside the hotel, will serve an American cuisine with a Southern emphasis. The lounge will overlook the courtyard area.

English firefighters observe American fire "engine-uity"

By Cathy LeCompte
Sun Editor

Assistant Divisional Officer Harry Paviour has visited the United States five times. To him, "it's like coming home," he said.

His partner in this latest trip, Station Officer Ronald Peake, is seeing America for the first time. "I'm thoroughly impressed," he said.

The two firefighters are participating in an "exchange program" where firefighters from Kent County, England spend a month in Virginia Beach, and, if budgetary concerns can be worked out, two Virginia Beach firefighters will visit "Jolly old England."

Paviour and Peake arrived in Virginia Beach on June 10 and will stay until July 7. Their itinerary includes spending time in every division to learn about our firefighting and fire prevention methods. They will also spend a day in some neighboring fire departments like Norfolk, Hampton and Fairfax County in Northern Virginia. Some time is set aside for sightseeing and fun as they will tour Virginia Beach, Williamsburg and the area military bases.

This is the first time the exchange program has been tried in Kent County, and only the third time firefighters from England have come to the U.S. Paviour said that if things go well this time, the program will be continued.

"What I gather from my own chief, providing it is successful and politically possible, he wants to continue it," Paviour said.

Peake and Paviour are so far impressed with what they've seen in the Virginia Beach Fire Department.

"There are some things that are different. It's not to say that they are better or worse, it's just that we do them differently."—Station Officer Ronald Peake, Kent County England Fire Brigade.

"Generally, I think," Peake said, "most of your firemen have a very good attitude."

They have noticed a great many differences in the way things are done here.

"There are some things that are different," Peake said. "It's not to say that they are better or worse, it's just that we do them differently."

Missing children

Possibly, nothing can be more devastating to a family than a loss of a child.

Currently, 1.8 million children are reported missing every year in the United States, and over 50,000 of them remain unaccounted for. Our children are turning up missing in epidemic proportions.

If we all stopped for a moment to imagine what it would be like, we would see that it is a problem we all must help to eliminate.

Many area businesses recently have begun to do something about it. Dominos Pizza had success with running pictures of missing children on their pizza boxes. Marva Maid, Birtcherds, Pet, Camelia and Miller's Dairies ran pictures on milk cartons. Last month, Peoples Drug Stores, Carvel Ice Cream Stores and TDX Systems, Inc. pitched in with various campaigns to bring missing children back. Many other businesses and organizations, too numerous to mention here, have contributed time, money and manpower to the cause of finding this country's lost.

—But more needs to be done.

Starting with parents and teachers and concerned citizens, we can better educate our children about the dangers that can await them in this world. We can teach our children the magic word "No." And we can teach them to trust their instincts about people. Children have keen observations about other people and we must learn to listen to them.

The Hampton Roads Missing Children Association is coordinating a special project, tentatively scheduled for August 31. The program is called "The Beacon of Hope" and will be a distinctive tribute to the missing children and their families. They want to install a large search light in the city emblem on Mount Trashmore in Virginia Beach, to serve as a beacon of hope in search of the missing faces. The light will reflect the true concern and be a perpetual sign of hope from a caring community. The President of the U.S. has been invited to the ceremony.

Theresa Northrup, a dedicated woman who serves as a volunteer with the Hampton Roads Missing Children Association, extends a simple invitation to the area media: "to put aside competitiveness and work as a major force to make this goal a reality."

Through the efforts of the Hampton Roads Missing Children Association and the business community, 12 children have been returned safely to their families. —C.L.

Gift of life

U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler launched a nationwide program a few days ago that deserves wide support. The campaign is aimed at finding donors for thousands of Americans in need of organ transplants. They include about 100 persons waiting for heart transplants and 7,000 for kidney transplants.

Symbol for the movement is 14-month-old Ryan Osterblom of Florida, who underwent surgery at a Pittsburgh hospital April 5 to have his diseased liver replaced. The operation began a few days after President Reagan's attention was drawn to the child's case by a Florida congressman, and Mrs. Heckler made a plea for a donor for him.

Mrs. Heckler has prepared a 30-second television spot urging Americans to become organ donors. The spot includes a toll-free telephone number of the American Council on Transplantation, 1-800-ACT-GIVE. Callers can receive information on how to become donors, thereby giving longer life to many children, teenagers and adults.

Cyclone aftermath

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Recent reports have estimated that nearly 250,000 families will need help to return to normal life after the recent cyclone in Bangladesh.

Additionally, some 90,000 homes, little more than huts, will have to be built or rebuilt.

CARE is helping by providing many of the supplies these families - mostly low income farmers - need to restore their land and homes.

This emergency response is in addition to CARE's on-going programs in Bangladesh.

CARE donors - those who have known throughout the years of the critical relief and development work CARE does around the globe - have responded generously to the plight of these people.

I am writing you today seeking your help in reaching other, equally concerned people to let them know who they too can help. On behalf of those who will benefit from the work of CARE, we thank you.

American pet mania

What common threads connect topiary trees, goldfish with dysfunctional bulging eyes and boys whose soprano singing voices have been preserved by surgery? Yi-Fu Tuan suggests that all three have been shaped by the combination of Dominance and Affection. This, he says, leads to the making of pets, which is what all three - boy, tree and goldfish - are.

In the hands of another author this topic would have become a polemic. Tuan simply invites the reader to consider human nature as it is expressed toward pets. There are many aspects of the world around them that human beings dominate but rather fewer for which they feel affection. Culture and individual taste will dictate what an individual chooses for a pet but these two emotions will determine how the pet is treated.

Dominance is expressed by subduing nature and altering it. Gardens are thought of as lovely, passive places, but they represent the taming of the natural environment. Pet animals have been altered, sometimes grotesquely, from the wild parent stock. Other human beings including children, women, slaves, and people with various handicaps have been treated as pets. "A pet is a diminished being, whether in the figurative or in the literal sense. It serves not so much the essential needs as the vanity and pleasure of its possessor. Under this broad definition, the ornamental slaves, serfs, and servants that once cluttered up the houses of the great were pets...A pet is a personal belonging, an animal with charm that one can take delight in, play with, or set aside as one wishes."

By Carolyn Caywood

Certainly Americans follow this behavior. Tuan says that roughly 15 percent of the total dog population is destroyed each year in animal shelters and compounds. "The majority of Americans keep their dogs for only two years or less. In other words, for these Americans dogs are kept so long as they are playful, endearing, and asexual pups."

And yet pets are dearly loved. They are given a value all out of proportion to their worth as resources. They provide opportunities for intimacy. The very dependency of the pet on its owner brings the two closer together. Pets are living toys. They offer adults the chance to play like a child. The dominance has been balanced by affection for the pet. It sounds like a beautiful relationship until Tuan quotes Nora in Ibsen's A Doll's House. "You've always been so kind to me. But our home has never been anything but a playroom."

Dominance and Affection is not a plea to treat animals more humanely or to give up the possession of pets. The author's intent is to describe and to suggest possible ways of looking at the world, but to argue or prove a point. He has succeeded admirably. No one who reads this book will be able to see a boy and his dog merely as a sentimental cliché any more.

The way people talk sometimes!

I love to talk with people. I like listening to some of the expressions they use, those colloquial sayings that really make the language interesting. I guess as an English major in college, I'm more in tune with language, and the way people use and abuse the English language is of special interest to me.

Sometimes I'm just amazed at the way people talk. They put a collection of words together, jumble them all up in their mouths and spit them out with no regard for order, or grammar or what sounds "right." Maybe I just have an extra sensitive ear for things like that, but sometimes when I hear people using the language incorrectly, they may as well be scraping their fingernails down a chalkboard.

My roommate knows how badly some of her misuses of the language get to me, and now she rarely misses an opportunity to grate my nerves. My pet peeve expression that she uses is, "It won't me." I have been her roommate for three years now and for those three, long years, I put up with that statement, but finally a couple of months ago, I had to correct her.

I asked her why she always said "It won't me" instead of "It wasn't me." She swore up and down that her high school English teachers and even her professors at ODU told her that it was acceptable. She went to high school in the Richmond area, so I can't vouch for her teachers there. Maybe it's a colloquial use and is accepted. But I have my serious doubts about the pros at ODU letting that one get by. I tried explaining to her that "won't" is the contraction for "will not," so in essence, she was saying "It will not me." I think she knows better, but she likes to watch me suffer when she says it now.

Ed's notes

By Cathy LeCompte

My recent trip to Arizona proved that the epidemic of rotten grammar usage is not an East Coast phenomenon. It has spread to the dusty plains of the Grand Canyon State.

I was out for dinner with my sister and brother-in-law, and I had just ordered a drink. As so often happens, the waitress asked for some proof of age. Ah, youth! (Rest assured, I am over 21.) I dug into my purse for my Virginia driver's license and handed it to her. She looked at the front with my picture on it very curiously, and then turned the license over to stare at the back. After a few seconds, she looked me straight in the eye and said, and I quote, "Where do the Commonwealth of Virginia be."

I was so dumbfounded by this that I couldn't think of how to reply to her at first. I just sort of stared in amazement at this very attractive woman who looked sort of intelligent. I knew she was no Einstein, but really!

I said, "It's the state of Virginia, you know, like one of the fifty? I sure you've heard of it."

She gave me a look as if to say, "I certainly have not."

She said, "Don't you have an Arizona license?"

I said, "I'm sorry, I'm only here for a week. I didn't think I'd need one."

With that, she handed me back my lovely Virginia operators permit and shuffled off to harass other tourists from states unknown. I dared my brother-in-law to leave a tip.

I guess I've been correcting people's grammar since I was about 12 or so. Only a few times has it gotten me in trouble. Like the times I would correct my mom while she was yelling at me about something I did wrong. Not a good move! I guess it's sort of a bad habit and I've tried not to be such a stickler about it. I'm getting lots better though. I

Between them, Peake and Paviour have 39 years of service in the fire brigade. Paviour holds a rank equivalent to a battalion chief and Peake, a captain, in the American fire service. Peake was a recipient of the Royal Life Saving Bronze Cross and Paviour holds a Queen's Fire Brigade Long Service and Good Conduct Medal. One of the major differences they see in the two countries' fire departments, is with the entrance requirements.

"As far as I've seen at the moment," Peake said, "ours is a more stringent test to get in." "A test to get in is something like two and a half days."

Their entrance requirements include strength tests, educational exams in math, English and I.Q., physical examinations and skill tests where the applicants learn to take orders from the fire brigade officers.

"We shout at them," Peake said, "just to see that they can take orders. We put them up a five story building and make them look over the top. We stick a breathing apparatus on them and put them in a darkened room and make sure they don't scream out or want to come out," he continued.

All this testing is done to find the best people for the limited jobs. The fire brigade service is very selective. The minimum age for retirement from the fire service in England is 50 years and many men make it a career. For this reason, there is not a lot of turnover and very few jobs are available each year.

"We had 800 applicants for 25 jobs," Peake said.

Kent County covers about 1,400 square miles and has a population of almost 1.5 million. Yet, there are only 65 fire stations, employing about 1,600 men. (As yet, there are no female firefighters in Kent.) Last year, the Kent Fire Brigade made over 16,000 calls. This figure is for fire, auto accidents and cliff rescues, for example, but does not include ambulance calls. The ambulance service in England is run completely separate from the fire service.

Of the 1,600 men, about 840 are known as "paid on call" firefighters. These men are paid a retaining fee to insure that they'll show up when alerted. They are similar to volunteers in that they work other jobs and don't have to stay at the stations, but they have to pass the same entrance requirements as the paid staff.

"You probably have more community spirit (with volunteers), but then it's a gamble as to whether anyone's going to show up," Paviour said. "By having retaining, you've secured their services. There's no chance of them not responding, because we've paid them to be available."

Both Peake and Paviour admired the U.S. approach to public relations where the fire department is concerned. The advertising campaigns and the informative brochures that are available here far exceed what they've been able to do in England. Our fire service is able to follow through more after a fire to provide information or to give good fire prevention training.

To beef up their public relations efforts, some of the firefighters have gone through short training courses in how to conduct themselves in a television interview and how to deal with the press. In the past, the fire brigade has suffered "bad press" and this is one effort to change some of that.

"At one time it was very anti-press, because we found the press was so unreliable," Paviour said. "We found that it was better not to say anything, than to get misquoted."

"We do get public relations training," Paviour said. "We learn what to expect from the interviewer and how the interviewer would expect us to answer."

"At times, I think we've been our own worst enemies," Peake said. "We're there when everybody needs us, but sort of silent service."

Paviour said that economics has played a big part in dousing their public relations attempts. They would like to print more literature, but can't fit it into the budget.

"I think economics has been our problem, or we've used economics as the barrier to literature," Paviour said.

Paviour and Peake had to go through a lengthy selection process to be considered for the "exchange program." The job was advertised for station officers and above. Then the applicants had to write a 200 word essay on why they wanted to come and what areas they'd like to learn more about while over here. All the applicants were interviewed and the chief made his decision. Paviour and Peake were chosen because of their interest in advancing the fire brigade.

"If you've got the service and the job at heart," Paviour said, "You've always got to be prepared to learn. It's all part of building up the experience, broadening your knowledge, outlook and attitude to improve in the service."

From their years of experience, Paviour and Peake have seen firefighters come and go and know what makes a good employee in a number of positions with the brigade. They said they strive to get a balance of men with different aspirations on the force.

"That is an art and a skill in itself," Paviour said, "getting the balance right." "You've got to have what we call the smoke and guts man," the guy who'll get in there and get his hands dirty and stay as a firefighter for 30 years," he said.

"And then you need to look for men with potential," Peake said. "On interview we do look at that. We say, 'Yes, this man is going to go up through the ranks.'" don't have to turn the TV off when they're interviewing Leon Spinks or Hulk Hogan anymore. I can listen to those double negatives and tense shifts without covering my ears.

About two years ago, I drove to New Orleans with some of my friends from college during Christmas vacation. We stopped in a little town somewhere in Georgia for gasoline. It was my turn to pay, so I got out of the car and stood there while the attendant, who was chewing tobacco at 5 o'clock in the morning, finished pumping the gas. When he was done, he turned to me and said an entire sentence that probably had ten or so words in it. I just smiled nervously and handed him a twenty. To this day, I have no earthly idea what he said. It's probably a good thing I don't speak fluent Georgian. I don't think I'd want to know.

"The major duties of the office are to support the U.S. and state constitutions, represent the state agencies and handle a case load of about 5,000 a year," Terry said. "When that office is operating at peak performance, all Virginians benefit."

Terry has spent eight years in the Virginia House of Delegates. So far, politics has been good to her. She says she hasn't felt any special pressure being a woman in politics.

"I've been pleased by the way I've been accepted by the people of Virginia," she said. "Campaigning and serving has been a very positive experience for me."

Terry says she thinks that Attorney General Gerald L. Baliles has run a well-managed office. The next attorney general won't have to make big changes.

"Whoever is elected the next attorney general will inherit a well-organized and well-staffed office," Terry said. "That's not to say that I would hesitate to make any changes I see fit. But I wouldn't make changes just for the sake of change."

The Virginia campaign trail, according to Terry, is long and populous. She has a large area to cover and a lot of people to see. She has gained respect for the art of campaigning in a large state.

"I have enormous regard for what it takes to make Virginians informed about a political contest," she said. I believe Virginians are interested in the same thing that they were interested in a decade ago, and that's good government. PA NJROTC receives award

VIRGINIA BEACH—The Princess Anne High School Naval Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps held its annual Change of Command Ceremony in the school gymnasium on Thursday, May 23. Cadet Lieutenant Commander Michael S. Prather was relieved as the unit's Company Commander by Cadet Lieutenant Commander Steven M. Roenker. Cadet Lieutenant Dwight Dauberman was relieved by Cadet Lieutenant Kimberly Salemi as the Company's Executive Officer and Cadet Lieutenant (Junior Grade) Anthony Sapp relieved Cadet Lieutenant (Junior Grade) Anthony Smith as the Operations Officer.

This year's Change of Command Ceremony and Final Review was dedicated to the memory of Captain Clifford E. Caton, USN (Retired) who died on April 8, 1985. Captain Caton was the founder of the NJROTC Program in Virginia Beach and was the first Naval Science Instructor at Princess Anne High School.

Mr. J. J. Owens and Dr. N. Jones, respectively the principal and assistant principal of Princess Anne High School, attended the ceremony. Approximately 150 teachers, parents and guests also attended, including many rising sophomores who intend to join the unit next year. The Ceremonial Band of the Commander-in-Chief, Atlantic Fleet provided music for the occasion.

Captain Charles A. Futch, USN, NJROTC Area FIVE Manager, was extended the honor of "Trooping the Line." Captain Futch then provided the highlight of the event by announcing that the Princess Anne unit had won the most prestigious award possible for an NJROTC unit - The Chief of Naval Education and Training's Most Outstanding Unit Award. The Princess Anne unit won this award in competition throughout the year against thirty other high school units in five states: Virginia, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Kentucky, Indiana, and West Virginia. Cadet Lieutenant Commander Prather accepted a permanent plaque along with a large traveling trophy in recognition of the honor. The award had been a closely guarded secret since the Cadets (and their instructors Capt. Frank Hamrick, USN (ret.) and CWO John Reimer, USN (ret.) by surprise. The attendees gave the unit a standing ovation when the award was announced.

Captain Thomas R. Sheridan, USN, Commanding Officer of the nuclear powered guided missile cruiser USS Virginia (CGN 38) delivered the main address. Captain Sheridan's remarks emphasized the importance of establishing early goals and of developing communication skills in preparation for assuming future responsibilities.

Several additional awards were presented. Cadet Fred Ehlers received the Cadet of the Year award for his sustained superior performance throughout the school year and was meritoriously advanced from Cadet Petty Officer Third Class to Cadet Petty Officer First Class. Three cadets were named as Distinguished Cadets, one from each year group: Cadet Lieutenant Commander Michael S. Prather (Senior), Cadet Master Chief Petty Officer Larry Andrews (Junior), and Cadet Petty Officer First Class Frederick Ehlers (Sophomore). Naval Science Instructor Captain F. G. Hamrick, USN (Retired), presented a special "True Friend" Award to Mrs. Ross Lee Ellison for her tireless efforts to benefit the Princess Anne NJROTC unit.

The formation of departing seniors received a special salute from their fellow cadets and, following established tradition, threw their uniform caps into the air as they marched out. A reception followed the ceremony which featured the cutting of a special cake by the incoming and outgoing Company Commanders.

Cox honored

The Virginia Retail Merchants Association has honored Cox Cable Tidewater for "one of the greatest consumer education efforts" in the country, VRMA president Sumpter T. Priddy said in reference to the cable company's Consumer Guideposts programs.

The company is near completion of a two-year commitment to produce and air 20 half-hour programs on a variety of topics intended to inform viewers on pertinent matters in the marketplace. The programs are aired several times a week on WCOX, Channel 11.

Priddy praised the company for donations of more than $300,000 in production costs and $65,000 in air time. The recognition and a certificate of appreciation were presented to Irvine Hill, Cox director of communications, at a recent VRMA meeting in Norfolk.

According to Priddy, "this (the donation) is an exemplary example of a private sector enterprise working with government." The series of programs has been a cooperative effort of Cox, the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services and other government agencies.

salaries were increased to $12,000 and $14,000, the maximum allowed then. Before that, salaries were increased in April 1981 to $8,000 and $10,000.

Mayor Harold Heischob said that he supported the increase to take care of the increase in work and in expenses.

Council, however, eliminated one section of the proposed ordinance which states that any member of Council would be reimbursed for any personal expenses incurred for official business. Councilwoman Nancy Creech said she was not sure what official business covered because no budget item had been provided to meet any additional expense. Money already is budgeted for travel and lodging, Councilman Robert G. Jones pointed out.

Henley objected to having the item on the agenda because it had never been discussed by Council. She said the first she knew about it was when she saw it Thursday when she received the agenda. She said she may sound like "Miss Goody Two Shoes", but I'm not comfortable with opening my agenda Thursday night with so many important issues we had no discussion on."

Before introducing the legislation, Del. Owen Pickett had asked Robert Jones to poll Council on his opinion. At that time, Henley said she did not approve of the increase.

Oberndorf said she was voting against the item because when she took the job she knew what she'd be paid.

Baum noted that the job doesn't pay very much for the time it takes. He suggested that the dissenting Council members be more sensitive toward the needs of those who are struggling. "I read somewhere you spend the money (made as Council member) on clothes," he said.

Henley interrupted, saying, "This is getting personal. I think salaries should be discussed at budget time." She said that consideration should be given for council to receive the same increase as city employees, within legal limits.

(b) (B.) In addition, there shall be an open season for taking first-year passage birds, also called passagers (hawk's caught wild before first moult), from September 15 through January 11 of each year only; except, that marked raptors may be recaptured at any time.

(d) (D.) A nonresident raptor trapping permit may be issued to applicants for the purpose of taking a raptor in Virginia, provided that his resident state is a state listed in Paragraph (k), Subpart C, part 21.29, Chapter 1 of Title 50, Code of Federal Regulations, as a participating state, and his resident state issues nonresident falconry permits or licenses, or otherwise provides for the taking of raptors by nonresidents. Nonresident applicants shall submit a copy of a valid resident state falconry permit and a copy of a valid import permit from their resident state. Nonresident permits shall be issued only in the general or master class.

(e) (E.) A permittee may purchase, sell, or barter any lawfully possessed raptor which was bred in captivity under authority of a raptor propagation permit issued under Part 21.30, Chapter 1 of Title 50, Code of Federal Regulations, and banded with a numbered seamless marker issued or authorized by the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Amend R18.1-8 (§ 8) to read as follows:
R18.1-8. (§ 8) Season for raptor hunting.
It shall be lawful to hunt nonmigratory game birds and game animals with raptors from October 1 through March 31, both dates inclusive.

Add a new regulation (section) numbered R18.1-8.1 (§ 8.1) to read as follows:
R18.1-8.1. (§ 8.1) Sunday hunting.

Pre-First of July celebrations at Maritime Museum

The Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum is presenting several traditional "almost 4th of July" special events on Friday and Saturday, June 28 and 29, in honor of our nation's birthday and the Museum's fourth anniversary. As the Museum's "gift" to the community for its support and patronage over the past years, all events are free and open to the public.

The schedule of events is Friday, June 28, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., "Otto Fisher Art Exhibit," an exhibit of original oil paintings by Fisher, commissioned by the U.S. Coast Guard to depict scenes of service rendered to our country by the USCG. On loan from the U.S. Coast Guard Headquarters in Washington, D.C., the exhibit continues through Sept. 3.

Friday, June 28, 7 p.m., "The Eastern Virginia Brass Quintet" will present an outdoor concert of American brass music. Beginning with a traditional "Fanfare" by Leon Stein, the Quintet will perform selections from George Frederick's "American Brass Band Journal," a few Joplin rags, tunes by Gershwin and Sousa marches.

Saturday, June 29, 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., "Sea Shanty Sing-along" will be led by Bill Henry, a member of the popular local Shanty Group The Press Gang. You'll hear all about these traditional American folk tunes from days of yesteryear when lives were so closely associated with the sea. Especially for young people, this performance will delight people of all ages.

Saturday, June 29, 11 a.m. to 12 noon, "Poppie The Clown presents 'Comedy Magic'" in a very special performance for our young Museum friends. Poppie promises several sea-faring magic tricks for these mariners.

Sun readers should call Martha Price at the Museum (422-1587) for more information.

MacArthur chapter to meet

NORFOLK—General of the Army Douglas MacArthur Chapter, Association of the United States Army, will hold the annual spring mixer 7 p.m., June 25, at the Officers Club, Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Virginia.

The program will include the installation of officers for 1985-86: Sheriff John R. Newhart, Chesapeake, President; CSM M. Baxter Vendrick, USAF, Norfolk, First Vice President; Robert B. Felty, Virginia Beach, Second Vice President and CSM Jesse Latham, USA (Ret.) Chesapeake, Secretary/Treasurer.

Fort Story Soldiers of the 4th Quarter 84 and 1st quarter 85 will be presented plaques.

The cost is $7 per person including hors d'oeuvres. For reservations and information Sun readers should contact Vicki Mathias at 547-6159. Reservations required by June 19.

Garden club gets award

The Linkhorn Park Garden Club was presented third place in the HANDS project at the recent annual awards luncheon of the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach. Seventeen crepe myrtle trees were given by the Club to the Virginia Beach Garden Park. Proceeds from the first annual luncheon and bridge party of the Linkhorn Park Club made the gift possible.

The second annual luncheon and bridge party was held by the Linkhorn Park Garden Club with Mrs. N. J. Ashman, chairman. Proceeds from this event will be used for the HANDS project. Mrs. E. W. Elver announced that Mrs. S. S. Howard won the exhibit award for the year, and the horticulture award went to Mrs. Major Pardue. Mrs. M. A. Zimmerman won the bridge marathon for the third year.

Run for Roses race set

The Second Annual Run for the Roses 8K race will take place on June 29, at 8 a.m. at the Norfolk Botanical Gardens. Pre-registration takes place at 7 a.m. the day of the race. Benefits of the race go to the Arthritis Foundation.

Sponsors are Norfolk Wholesale Floral and Great Big Greenhouse.

Fees are $7 until the day of the race and $9 on race day. For more information, Sun readers should call Carol Senechal at 440-0169 or Charlie George at 495-2516.

Summer movies for kids

For the 15th consecutive summer, the Pembroke Mall Theatre will present their Summer Children's Movie Series. In all, ten weeks of movies will be presented on Mondays through Thursdays at 10 a.m. (a different show each week). Parents and children may choose between the all G-rated series or the all PG-rated series. Season passes for all ten weeks are $3.50 and tickets for any individual show are $1. Both series started this week with "Heidi's Song" (G) and "The Never Ending Story" (PG). For further information, Sun readers should call 499-0003.

Crime Solvers

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is offering a cash reward of up to $1,000 for information that leads to the arrest of the man who sexually assaulted a Virginia Beach woman on February 21st of this year.

On that Thursday morning at 3:30 a.m., a 33-year-old woman returned to the home of a friend in the 500 block of Edwin Drive. After parking and getting out of her car, a man ran up to her and, while placing his hand over her mouth, forced her to the side of the house where she was sexually assaulted.

The man was scared off when the victim's friend opened the back door of the house and called out her name. He ran, jumped in to a small, possibly foreign, dark colored vehicle, which was extremely noisy, and drove off.

The suspect was described as being in his mid-twenties, six-foot tall, weighing 160 pounds, with short dark brown hair, brown eyes and no facial hair. He was wearing a light beige or white v-neck sweater and tan pants.

Anyone with information about this crime or any crime committed in Virginia Beach is asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Cash rewards are also paid for information about the location of wanted people, stolen property, and drugs. Callers never have to reveal their names or appear in court to collect the rewards.

Godspeed photos on display

The photographs will be exhibited at the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum.

24th Street & Oceanfront from June 12 through June 26.

Museum hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Sunday, 12 noon to 5 p.m. There is a small admission to the museum. Sun readers should contact Martha Price at 422-1587.

Computer day at mall

On Saturday June 22, 1985, 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Pembroke Mall and The Tidewater Computer Users Group will combine efforts to present "Computer Day" at the mall.

Nearly one dozen computer user groups will participate in the show. Each group will set up a booth with the necessary hardware and software to provide demonstrations. Qualified personnel will be on hand to answer your questions and help solve problems you may be having.

Participating user groups include: Apple - Tidewater Apple Worms; Atari - Southside Tidewater Atari Technical User Society; Coco - Chesapeake

Color Computer User Group; Commodore - Tidewater Commodore User Group; Epson - Hampton Epson User Group; Heath - Tidewater Heath User Group; Osborne - Osborne User Group; Sanyo - Tidewater Sanyo Users Group; Texas Inst. - Tidewater TI Users.

This show will have something for everybody. The newest models, the latest software and expert help!...All this under one roof and it's free.

For further information, Sun readers should call Buck Maddrey at 464-2100 (activities director for the host computer group, STATUS.)

Beach woman wins recipe contest

NEW YORK—Paskha, a family recipe submitted by Kristina G. Scott of Virginia Beach, is among the winners of the Ladies' Home Journal Heritage Recipe Contest. Her recipe appears in the magazine's current (July) issue.

"My Russian grandparents and mother traveled through World War II-torn Europe," says Scott, "and came to America seeking freedom, opportunity and a new life. Although most of their belongings were destroyed when the baggage compartment of the train on which they were traveling was bombed, the special wooden paskha mold that had been in the family for generations (along with this recipe for the traditional Easter dessert) survived."

Her winning recipe, along with 99 others, appears in the just published L.H.J. Statue of Liberty Cookbook, a 2-color, 48-page book saluting the wealth of ethnic traditions that make up America's heritage, plus photos of the Statue's past and present.

Proceeds from the book will benefit The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, Inc. Copies are available for $3.95 each, including postage and handling, by writing to Dept. L.H.J., Palm Coast, P. O. Box 6007, Palm Coast FL 32037.

Psychic fair planned

VIRGINIA BEACH—The Fellowship Center of Virginia Beach will hold a Psychic Fair on Saturday, June 29, from 12 to 6 p.m., at the Fellowship Center, located at 620 14th Street.

The Psychic Fair will feature Tidewater's top professionals in astrology, numerology, tarot, hand analysis, intuitive hand-writing, psychometry and spiritual readings. Readings are $10.

Renowned artist James Yax will do an Innerscape drawing from person's vibrations. These are miniature drawings for $25.

The public is invited. For information, Sun readers should call 428-3782. The proceeds from the fair will benefit the Fellowship Center Church.

The turnout was great for the 30th anniversary Boardwalk Art Show. Artists were screened carefully this year and the quality of the show improved over previous years. The great weather plus the better quality were factors in attracting the large crowd. Sun photo by Bill McBride.

Debate continues on high rise truck ban

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Close to 200 "high riders" who have been banned from Atlantic Avenue almost got kicked out of City Hall Monday night as well.

They had gone to the Council meeting to protest the city ordinance which bans all trucks from Atlantic Avenue, an ordinance intended to reduce the "cruising" of Atlantic Avenue, especially on weekends.

At the start of the meeting, Mayor Harold Heischober called on the group's attorney, Gary Byler, and asked for a show of hands to indicate the number of persons there on the issue. When most of the people in the Council Chambers seated and standing along the sides raised their hands, the spectators applauded and cheered. More were in the hallway.

Heischober shouted, "Leave now!" No one left because they apparently did not believe what they heard.

Heischober, clearly irritated, repeated, "Leave!" or "Leave now," several times. When Byler questioned the decision, Heischober said, "You told me, Mr. Byler, 'There will be no applause, no speaking.'"

The "high riders" were allowed to remain but had to wait until 10:30 p.m., three-and-a-half hours later, to be heard.

The city ordinance bans all trucks from Atlantic Avenue. Although four-wheel vehicles are not trucks, those which have raised bumpers 22 inches from the ground often have truck licenses which the owners got, Byler said, just to be on the safe side. The owners apparently like to parade their vehicles along Atlantic Avenue.

The way the ordinance is written, any vehicle with a truck license is banned from the street during the summer season during the popular evening hours. This includes the truck-license-bearing "high riders."

Byler said that the ban is selective, unfair and unjust for a small segment of the population. He said that trucks are, legally, vehicles of 7,500 pounds or more, but that fully-loaded trucks are allowed to use Atlantic Avenue while the four-wheel drive enthusiasts are given the citations. He said that enforcement is random and haphazard, and fosters an unhealthy attitude between citizens and Virginia Beach officials.

He asked that the Council reconsider its ordinance and exclude four-wheel drives from the ban.

Heischober also abruptly cut off Council discussion following Byler's statement.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said that he "never had been told I can't say something in 11 years (on Council)." He conceded, however, that Heischober was the mayor and could run the meeting as he saw fit, but asked that the item be put on the agenda next Monday for reconsideration.

Before that, Heischober told the group that panel trucks, pickup trucks and four-wheel drives are not considered trucks, but those four-wheel drives which have bumpers 22 inches above the

Mentally handicapped needs neglected

By Cathy LeCompte
Sun Editor

Judy Beckstedt, president of Concerned Citizens for Special Group Homes, says that the needs of her son and others like him are being neglected by the community.

"After the age of 21, there is nothing available for the severely and profoundly retarded adult except an institution," said Beckstedt. "We want to see an alternative to that."

The newly formed organization wants to establish group homes in the Virginia Beach area to care for severely and profoundly retarded adults. This is the first such group in Virginia, a state that often lags behind in mental health care. The group is small, approximately 60 members, most of whom have a severely retarded family member. Some, who have younger children, are working toward the goal of having a well-established program, so that by the time their children reach age 21, there will be alternatives.

"We know there are so many people out there who need this help," said Beckstedt. "We just can't seem to reach them, because their names can't be given out by social services."

The organization has established some goals and guidelines for the group home that they envision for their children.

They want the home to provide 24-hour care with three to five clients in each home. The clients must be 21 and over and in need of long-term care; that is, if permanent residence is necessary, it's available. Also, the clients must fall into the severely or profoundly retarded range. The group expects to establish programs outside the home five days a week. And after they've secured a place in Virginia Beach, they want to assist other cities in starting homes.

Many tasks lie ahead for the fledgling group, and foremost, according to Beckstedt, is increasing awareness.

"We are the ones that know the hurt and the pain," she said. "We have to let other people know."

Jay T. Lazier, director of the Virginia Beach Mental Retardation/Developmental Disabilities programs, spoke at the club's third meeting and called it "probably the most important meeting I've ever attended."

Community Development projects studied

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Preserving the communities for its present residents and for future low-to-moderate-income housing is the main thrust of a consultant's report of the city's Community Development areas.

The long-awaited study, was presented Monday evening by Joe Crass, with Planning Management Associates of Newport News. A number of zoning issues in the Community Development area have been delayed over the past year pending the report.

Generally, the report recommends completely residential communities at the present zonings, and only those commercial enterprises which do not extend their services outside the communities.

In some cases, Crass has recommended the elimination from Community Development areas established commercial or industrial parcels or those areas eliminated from residential use by Navy air rights. These fall in the high noise or accident zones delineated by the AICUZ study.

In other cases, rezoning of property has been recommended to discourage commercial and industrial incursions in the neighborhoods.

The areas are low-income areas which qualify for Community

Mounted patrol get diplomas

By Cathy LeCompte
Sun Editor

There were whinnies and shouts, hoof stomps and applause as the first mounted patrol in Virginia Beach held its graduation exercises on Thursday at Camp Pendleton.

After their first week on the job, the mounties had compiled between 25 and 30 arrests. One horse and rider even pursued and apprehended a drunken driver on Atlantic Avenue.

"I didn't expect the horses to be vehicles," said Chief Charles R. Wall, "but this particular driver had two previous DUI convictions, so we got a dangerous driver off the street."

The patrol's major assignments will be at the oceanfront this summer. They will work special events like parades, the Neptune Festival, Family Fun Day and some sporting events.

The unit has six uniformed officers, one supervisor and nine horses. All the horses were donations from the community. They will be stationed at Camp Pendleton in a building that they recently remodeled as a stable and tack room.

Lt. Frank Drew, head officer in the unit, said he thought many citizens might express concern over the cost of the project, because horses and their care are expensive.

"The entire budget is under $20,000," Drew said. "That's less than one fully equipped police car."

The mounted patrol gave a demonstration to music of their skill in maneuvering the horses. Two horses ran through an obstacle course to show some of the training necessary to prepare them for the crowds and noises of the oceanfront.

The unit will patrol the oceanfront through October, move to major shopping center parking lots for November through January and train in February and March.

The mounted officers and horses are: Lt. Frank Drew on "Tag," Officer Paul Lanteigne on "Frisbee," Officer Bernie Ruby on "Beau," Officer Rosemary Larkin on "Rio" and Officer B. B. Batten on "Rebel."

Boardwalk entertainment planned

Sticks and stones...

The most recent Virginia Beach City Council entanglement is reminiscent of the old children's rhyme "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but names will never hurt me."

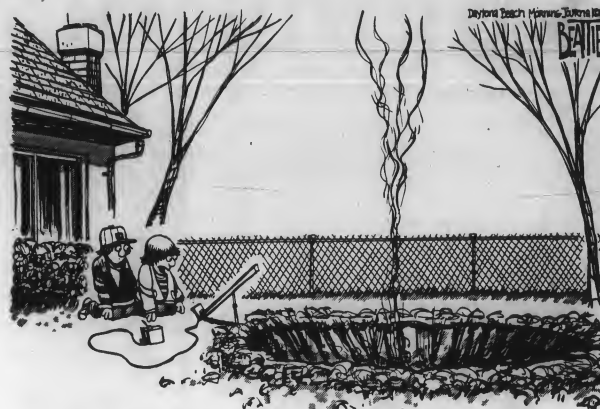

This latest row came when the council tried to vote themselves a pay raise—a luxury many of us would like to have at least once in our lives. It was reported by this paper and others that biting personal attacks were waged by some council members.

The two most often clashing were Councilman John A. Baum and Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf. The verbal warfare often strayed from the issue at hand (the pay raise) and stung more personal areas like family and what council members spend their salaries on.

Nonetheless, the City Council voted 9-2 to give themselves a pay raise, bringing the salaries up to the limit allowed for cities with populations of 200,000 and above. The Mayor will receive $17,000 and council members, $15,000 a year.

The majority said the pay raise was warranted because of the extra time and expenses of the job. The minority said that the increase should have been discussed at budget time and that when council members actively seek the public offices, they know what the pay and the hours are.

It is estimated by the Virginia Beach Department of Economic Development that the annual household income in Virginia Beach is $30,843. It is doubtful that people seek positions in city government to get rich; at least not from their salaries. There must be other motives, and the citizenry can only hope that one of those reasons is serve the people.—C.L.

Letters To The Editor

Central American awareness

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Hundreds of Virginians in at least 30 citizen organizations are currently engaged in peace efforts related to Central America. The underlying philosophy behind all these activities is that war with Nicaragua is less likely if Americans know more about that small Central American country.

A "work brigade" of Virginians will spend the month of June building a rural health clinic in Nicaragua. Other Virginians are helping to set up a small cooperative to manufacture bicycle frames from locally produced tubing. Bicycles are needed because of a transportation shortage caused by fighting in the country.

Karl Bermann, author of a book on U.S.-Nicaraguan relations and president of the Tidewater Nicaragua Project Foundation, believes that such humanitarian aid shows that the American people can be good neighbors.

"The two peoples are not exactly strangers," says Bermann. "The United States has had a long 'special relationship' with Nicaragua dating to 1912, when a protectorate was set up after the marines were sent in."

The present Nicaraguan government wants to make fundamental changes in the backward economic and social situation it inherited. Many Virginians familiar with Nicaragua's history do not see the country as a national security threat. Instead, they want to encourage that poor central American nation to solve its own economic and social problems.

One to keep

Economic realities have played a major role in the decline of the traditional family in which Dad works and Mom stays home to care for the children. These days, many a Mom brings home a paycheck, too. More often than not she has to, or the family is forced to stint and sacrifice.

The larger personal exemptions and standard deductions in the Reagan tax reform package are "pro-family," as the president noted. And so is the change in Individual Retirement Accounts that would allow each spouse to set aside $2,000 a year in tax-deferred savings.

Together these features could give many families the financial flexibility to keep Mom at home or permit her to work only part time.

At present, a spouse without wage earnings is allowed only $250 a year for an IRA—and then only if the employed spouse has one.

The present low limit sounds like someone's idea of a joke. It is unrelated to the enormous contribution to the nation's well-being made by those who keep homes running, children lovingly cared for and the elderly attended.

The only significant reason the current spousal limit is so low is concern about lost revenue. Folding the new limit in a revenue neutral general tax-reform package should make it more palatable to Congress. It is estimated that up to 5 million spouses would take advantage of such a change.

About 23 million, or one-fourth of all households, now have IRAs. The savings they represent are incentives to capital formation, essential if the economy is to create more jobs. And the proposed change may well reinforce society's bedrock, the traditional family. That alone should be justification enough.

Opportunities for visually impaired

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Virginia's Business Enterprises Program, a part of the Department for the Visually Handicapped, is an excellent employment opportunity for legally blind individuals who wish to enter the challenging field of food service as a manager. The goals of this program are to provide efficient service to the public at a reasonable cost and to offer an opportunity for employment to visually impaired individuals. The 82 snack bars and cafeterias located across the Commonwealth are evidence that a blind person can be independent and competent as a successful manager of a food service operation. To obtain further information about this program, please call the Business Enterprises Office in Richmond at (804) 264-3164, or contact the Statewide Regional Office of the Department for the Visually Handicapped in Norfolk, 623-8003.

Which vitamin is best for you?

The balding, slightly overweight man walks into the health food store.

"May I help you?" the clerk asks.

"I need something to give me energy, lose twenty pounds, and keep me from going bald. What should I take?"

You may not fit the description of the man in the health food store, but you've probably wondered just which particular nutrient it is you need. You may have heard vitamin E is good for heart and circulatory problems, and so along with 40 million other people in America have decided to take vitamin E supplements. Or you may have heard vitamin C lessens the severity of a cold and along with 50 million other people now supplement with that particular vitamin.

Nutritional needs are as different as fingerprints, and the scientific truth is no single nutrient can do the job of all. Your body needs all essential nutrients to function. Your

Let me tell ya about my team

For a couple of weeks now, the ladies on my softball team have been bugging me to write a column about them, so I'm going to oblige. In most cases, I'll forego the last names to protect the innocent or guilty, whichever the case may be.

The name of our team is the Long John Silvers Bears. Long John Silvers is the sponsor, but don't ask me where we came up with Bears. I think Pirates, or Buccaneers or Barracudas would be better. Sometimes the name is rather appropriate, except that we look more like the Bad News Bears.

Actually, we have a lot of talent on our team. Now I may not have much talent, but I can sure spot it in other people. After all, I've been playing this game since I was a chubby fifth grader and playing for the "Ladybugs."

This is my first year playing in the Virginia Beach League, so all these players are new to me. Therefore, I can be quite objective in my assessment of their abilities.

Let's see, where do I start? I think I'll start with our left fielder, Kelly Hutchison. (She likes to see her name in print. She wanted to submit a picture, too!) Kelly is an excellent ballplayer. She's one of those natural athletes that we all know and envy. She's also very meticulous about dressing for the games. The other day, she spent 35 minutes putting on her socks.

One of our pitchers, Carole, is the kind of person every team should have. Carole will let you joke on her throughout the entire game and she just keeps smiling. And then after the game, she dumps a beer on your head.

Our other pitcher, Lucy, is a player you can really count on. You can count on her to be late and to drink at least a six-pack before the game.

Ed's notes By Cathy LeCompte

We have one complete individualist on our team named Sharon. In fact, I can almost guarantee that no other team has a ballplayer quite like her. She came to our first game wearing plaid, bathing trunks and high top fluorescent tennis shoes! Need I say more.

Every team has to have a clutch player, that rare breed of ballplayer that you can put anywhere on the field and she'll give it her all. We have one named Peggy. And talk about deceptive speed! She tears around the base paths so fast, it almost looks like she's running in place.

Sarah is our stability player. She coaches a girl's softball team during the school year, so we can always count on her for moral support by shouting all that coaching lingo. She's probably a little hoarse after every game.

Our second baseman Michelle, also coaches a team and is a good ballplayer. She is transformed into mega-all-star material when a certain gentleman is present at the game.

We have lots of Cathys on the team, so we had to resort to last names. But that didn't work either, because our coach couldn't remember our last names.

Let me spend a few lines here to tell you about our illustrious coach, Chuck. On second thought, he's a person you must experience first hand. And besides, anything I say can and will be used against me at the next game.

Our best fan is Jeannie who was supposed to be an outfielder until she decided to mess up her knee playing soccer. Now she just comes to every game and limps around holding everyone's car keys and Hoff's cigarettes for her between inning nicotine fix.

Another outfielder, Cindy, is into the "layered look" in softball attire. She always wears at least two shirts, even when it's 90 degrees.

Byler said that a number of vehicles are sold off the lots with that bumper height.

"No!" maintained Heischober.

"Yes!" returned the spectators, in chorus. That was when Heischober sought to end the meeting.

Councilman John A. Baum said that the issue was highly emotional and "my wife told me not to discuss it." He added that he didn't "see any need to have the big crowd here another time."

Councilman Robert E. Fentress, Virginia Beach Borough Councilman, sponsored the group's appearance before Council.

And now I suppose you want to know about me. Well, sometimes Chuck lets me play shortstop and sometimes he lets me coach first base. It's really a toss up as to which one I'm better at. Here's a typical pre-game conversation between the coach and me.

Chuck: Cathy, uh, uh, LeBreck, no I mean LeCompte, come over here a second.

Cathy: Yes, Chuck.

Chuck: Now you can have your choice tonight. You can play at short, at second, or in the outfield. Which do you want to do?

Cathy: Well, Chuck, I guess you can put me at shortstop until I start to mess up a lot and then you can pull me.

Chuck: Cathy, go coach first base!

So that's about the size of it folks. I call 'em like I see 'em! The season is almost over now, and I have to admit it's really been fun. Maybe our record isn't that great, but we had lots of fun playing together, and that's what counts! What do you say, Bears, are we playing "fall ball"?

Nutrition

health is only as good as the weakest link in the chain.

The heart, for example, is a muscle and needs calcium to contract. It needs magnesium to relax, and potassium to beat regularly. These nutrients in turn are dependent, on other team members—like calcium on magnesium, vitamin D and phosphorus.

A calcium deficiency over a number of years can lead to brittle or broken bones in later life, because the body will compensate by actually leaching the mineral from bones and teeth to supply a vital organ, the heart.

What if we were to practice this concept of nutrition in reverse—set our goal to build optimal health? Over a period of years the results could be as great in our favor. Dr. Richard Passwater, author of Supernutrition and Supernutrition for Healthy Hearts, believes we could actually reduce disease by as much as 80 percent by practicing super-nutrition.

Other experts, too, like Dr. Fred Klenner of Reidsville, N.C. have researched and worked with nutritional therapy for decades. They know that providing the body with optimal nutrition can make it function smoothly. It can carry out catalytic actions with enzymes, remake millions of red blood cells per second with protein, and form bones and teeth with minerals. It can even restore itself to health.

One prominent M.D. admitted to me recently that he knew nothing about nutrition but that he believed it played a role in health and the cause of disease. We may be far from Thomas Edison's prediction that "the doctor of the future will give no medicine but will interest his patient in the care of the human frame, in diet and in the cause and prevention of disease", but with more nutritionally aware physicians and millions of people taking their health seriously, supernutrition may be the wave of the not-too-distant future.

"If your energies are channeled correctly," Lazier said, "you can achieve your goals."

The group hopes to get funding from state and local agencies that fall under the community services jurisdiction. Lazier said that when the budgeting time comes, they need a big turnout at the meetings.

"We need to see the place packed with concerned people if we're going to show the need," he said.

Lazier also stressed the importance of doing an extensive needs assessment and presenting that package to the proper people.

"You need to find out how many people really need the service," Lazier said. "You need to know when they need it and exactly what type of care you're talking about. Then, you'll be able to request all the money you need."

Diane House, vice president of Concerned Citizens for Special Group Homes, expressed the frustration the parents of handicapped children often feel.

"So many parents get bogged down with caring for that child 24 hours a day that they aren't able to find out about groups like this," she said. We just think there should be alternatives to sending our children off, far away, to an institution. They should be able to get good care in their own communities."

Concerned Citizens for Special Group Homes meets on the third Thursday of every month. For more information, call Diane House at 464-4722.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED RULEMAKING PROCEEDING GOVERNING THE PLACEMENT AND INSTALLATION OF NETWORK INTERFACE DEVICES IN EXISTING BUSINESS AND RESIDENCES AND IN ALL NEW MULTI-STORY, MULTI-OCCUPANCY BUILDINGS—CASE NO. PUC830039

By order dated March 1, 1984 the Commission adopted rules governing the clarification and definition of the point of demarcation via a network interface device ("NID") separating the telephone company-provided facilities from customer premises wiring. These rules also addressed the installation and placement of NIDs for new single one and two line installations in single or duplex residence or business structures and for simple one and two line installations in multi-story or multi-occupancy buildings, campuses, malls, etc.

The Commission is now considering additional rules which will govern simple one and two line NID installations in existing business and residences and installation of NIDs in all new-multi-story, multi-occupancy buildings, beginning construction after January 1, 1986. The rules would govern the installation of NIDs for reasons other than the initial installation of telephone service by a network installer-repair person.

The text of the proposed rules can be read at the Commission's Document Control Center, Floor B1, Jefferson Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia, and during regular business hours at the business offices where bills may be paid of your telephone company.

Interested persons may submit written comments on the proposed rules on or before August 29, 1985, by filing an original and fifteen (15) copies of such comments with George W. Bryant, Jr., Clerk, Virginia State Corporation Commission, c/o Document Control Center, P.O. Box 2118, Richmond, Virginia 23216. These comments must refer to Case No. PUC830039. Anyone who wishes to be heard by the Commission on the subject of the rules must file an original and fifteen (15) copies of a request for hearing not later than August 29, 1985, with George W. Bryant, Jr., Clerk Virginia State Corporation Commission, P.O. Box 2118, Richmond, Virginia 23216, and must refer to Case No. PUC830039. A hearing on the proposed rules will be granted only at the discretion of the Hearing Examiner. In the absence of a request for hearing, the Hearing Examiner may be expected to act on the proposed rules after considering all written comments.

PROPOSED INCREASES

General Fund:
Finance Department	$51,595
Personnel	19,266
Public Works	348,100
Planning	32,685
Economic Development	40,158
General Services	43,910
Fire	191,701
	$727,415

ESTIMATED REVENUE

General Fund:
Proceeds from Capital Lease Agreements	$727,415

Community

Development funds which are used to pay for water, sewer, roads and home improvements. Because of the improvement anticipated in the area however, speculators have been purchasing lots within the community.

Cross said that "to use Community development funds for speculative gain which would not help current residents should be avoided. He said that a "speculative fever" is present in the Mill Dam community. He also said that Seatack also has proved popular to speculators.

Among the recommendations for individual neighborhoods were:

Atlantic Park—elimination of the industrial section and the area in the AICUZ zone.

Beechwood—has been redeveloped and should be phased out.

Burton Station—elimination of the area impacted by the Norfolk International Airport where residences are not permitted; rezoning industrial property to agricultural classification so that the residents who are located there will be permitted to continue to live there, but will receive protection from industrial incursion.

Doyltown—under some pressure for development. A rezoning request for apartments from R-5 single-family, is not recommended and the present office use area should be withdrawn from the development area.

Graceton—self-contained but has a traffic problem.

Lake Smith—A business-zoned property where a home for the elderly is located should be rezoned to R-8 residential to avoid further rezoning at the Independence Boulevard intersection. The home would remain under the grandfather clause.

Lakeside, a parcel owner by the City of Norfolk and sought by a developer, should remain zoned R-3 (low density single-family) to avoid speculation.

Newlight—not allow a "strip out" in commercial from Kempsville and Indian River Road.

Newsom Farms—retain R-6 single-family zoning; prevent expansion of auto repair yard there now; rezone a B-2 (commercial) area to R-6 with the businesses there now operating under the grandfather clause.

Queen City—two-thirds in Virginia Beach and one-third in Chesapeake, has small-sized lots and problems with titles. Vacant land now zoned B-2 should be rezoned to R-8 (duplexes).

Reedtown—Rezone one parcel to B-2 and remove it from the neighborhood and allow no commercial on Wishart Road.

Seatack—reduce in area by removing considerable land restricted by Navy air rights other land where a school, shopping center, hotel, and trailer court are located, industrial land where Lone Star is located, and Salt Marsh Point.

Gardening hot-line set

VIRGINIA BEACH—The Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/Cooperative Extension has their summer grow-line in operation. Area residents are encouraged to call 427-8148 for assistance with gardening questions. The grow-line is available Monday-Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Bloodmobile set

An American Red Cross Bloodmobile will be located at the City of Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Building, 4700 Recreation Drive on Thursday, June 27 from 12 noon to 4 p.m.

Three named to VWC Trustees Board

NORFOLK/V.A. BEACH — Three prominent area business leaders, an alumnus, and a minister have been named to the Board of Trustees at Virginia Wesleyan College. The election took place in Hampton at the Virginia Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church.

The new trustees are Mrs. Nancy A. Creech, president of Ayers Insulating and Supply Company; David Furman, board chairman of Farm Fresh Supermarkets; James W. Griffiths, president of Waters and Martin; Colon H. Whitehurst, a Chesapeake attorney; and the Rev. Dr. J. Carroll Fink, superintendent of the Portsmouth District of the United Methodist Church.

Furman, Griffiths, and Mrs. Creech have been serving as members of the President's Advisory Council at Virginia Wesleyan. Whitehurst is a 1974 graduate of the college. Dr. Fink will serve as an ex-officio member of the board during his tenure as district superintendent.

Mrs. Creech, a member of the Virginia Beach City Council since 1982, is a member of the Board of Directors of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce and the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce, as well as the Virginia Beach General Hospital, Virginia Symphony and Virginia Museum of Marine Sciences. She is a member of Thalia Lynn Baptist Church.

Furman, a past president of the Virginia Food Dealers Association, founded Farm Fresh Supermarkets in 1957. Active in many civic endeavors, he is chairman of the United Jewish Appeal and a past recipient of the National Conference of Christians and Jews Brotherhood Award. Furman is a member of Temple Israel.

Griffiths, president of Waters and Martin since 1963, is a past chairman of the President's Advisory Council at Virginia Wesleyan. He has served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Virginia Symphony, the YMCA, Goodwill and Junior Achievement of Tidewater. Griffiths is a member of Epworth United Methodist Church.

Optometric Assoc. elects pres.

WILLIAMSBURG—Dr. Kenneth A. Lebow, a Virginia Beach doctor of optometry was recently elected President of the Virginia Optometric Association. The election was part of the state eye doctor's annual convention held in Williamsburg.

Dr. Lebow received his doctorate of optometry degree from the Pennsylvania College of Optometry, specializes in contact lenses, pediatric vision care and subnormal vision, and is a member of the Virginia Society to Prevent Blindness and the Association of Children with Learning Disabilities. The Virginia Beach optometrist is also a Fellow in both the Virginia and American Academies and is a nationally known lecturer on contact lenses. He is a past president of the Tidewater Optometric Society.

Dr. Lebow urged the Virginia doctors of optometry "to band together as never before in providing the public with the best possible vision care with the most up-to-date diagnostic tools available to the profession. As the primary eye care provider, Virginia optometrists have a moral obligation to educate the public as to the benefit of quality, cost effective, preventive vision care," said Lebow.

In addition to serving as President of the Virginia Optometric Association, Dr. Lebow will chair the Virginia delegation at the American Optometric Association's national congress.

Woman's club sponsors show

For the 13th year Cape Henry Woman's Club will sponsor The Sugar Plum Tree Shop. Although a few local artists and craftsmen have been invited to participate, the main purpose of the shop is to supplement the income of senior citizens of the Tidewater area. Through the sale of their handmade articles, seniors have added hundreds of needed dollars to their fixed incomes. A total of $134,000 has been returned to area citizens through this project.

Members of the Cape Henry Woman's Club will staff The Sugar Plum Tree Shop located in the Lynnhaven Jr. High School cafeteria, 1250 Bayne Drive, Virginia Beach. It will be open Friday, July 5 through Thursday, July 11, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. The shop will be closed on Sunday, July 7. Admission is free.

This is a non-profit service provided by the Cape Henry Woman's Club. The senior citizens receive all of their profit except a $1 registration fee. All money realized from the registration and consignment fees (for artists and craftsmen) is used to promote The Sugar Plum Tree Shop for the following year.

Library sponsors woodwind concert

The Prelude Woodwind Quintet, performing on Tuesday, July 2, 1985, at 7 p.m. at the Great Neck Area Library, 1251 Bayne Drive, will be the first concert in a summer series provided by the Young Audiences of Virginia, Inc. This quintet explores the bridge between music and imagination, actually having the listener paint with sound. Audiences of all ages will enjoy the performance, which is especially intended for young people. For further information on this performance, or the series, Sun readers should call the library at 481-6094. The performance will be outside; participants may want to bring something to sit on.

Rev. Hodges receives doctorate

Reverend Fredrick H. Hodges, executive director of the Volunteers of America - Tidewater, Virginia branch, was among twelve ministers who recently received Doctor of Ministry degrees from Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington, DC.

Dr. Hodges, an ordained United Methodist Clergyman who also is an active marriage, family, and sex therapist, submitted a project-thesis that dealt with "The Pastoral Care Ministry of Marriage and Family Therapy in the Identification and Expression of Delayed Hurt and Anger." He had earned a BA degree from Wilmington College in Wilmington, Ohio, and a Master of Divinity Degree at Methodist Theological Seminary in Columbus, Ohio.

Dr. Hodges, a member of the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapists, and the American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists, joined the Volunteers of America - a national non-profit human service agency - in 1971 as Executive Director and Manager of Atlantis Apartments, a Volunteers of America low-income housing project in Virginia Beach. Since then, he has developed and managed a number of human service programs which include a marriage, family, and sex counseling center, a state-licensed child care center, transitional living program for the mentally retarded and mentally disabled, and apartments for low-income families.

Dr. Hodges has also taught, lectured and facilitated seminars and workshops for Tidewater Community College, Chesapeake General Hospital, Virginia Beach General Hospital, Eastern Virginia Medical School, DePaul Hospital, Portsmouth Psychiatric Center, and the Volunteers of America Marriage and Family Counseling Center.

Dr. Hodges is a member of the West Ohio Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church, he resides in Virginia Beach with his wife and three children.

Eagle Vision celebrates first

Eagle Visions, Inc., video programming and production, has just celebrated its first anniversary in the Tidewater area. Eagle Visions' first year's success has been predicated on its Video Brochure, a dynamic approach in helping Tidewater businesses project a much sharper and complete image than a paper brochure can. It has also aided the corporate community with training and instructional video tapes, and commercials. Eagle Visions also completed its first three music video tape productions, not to mention documentation of the Virginia Beach Pops! The corporation's principal personnel after its first year of business are:

John Crumish, a former banker and Wall Street broker, who is president of the company and heads up marketing and sales.

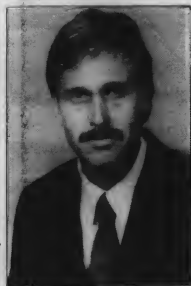

Christopher Naughton, Vice President, is an attorney turned producer and has also anchored a weekly news-information program on the national CBN cable network for the last two years.

Scott Lindquist, a former producer in Los Angeles for Pacific Video, has brought his marketing and production skills to Eagle Visions and already has produced several commercials for local clients.

Rhodes elected credit officer

VIRGINIA BEACH—William D. Rhodes has been elected Credit Officer of United Virginia Bank. Rhodes received an AB degree in liberal arts from Tufts University in 1961, and an MBA degree in business from Harvard Business School in 1971. He joined United Virginia Bank in September, 1984 as a Senior Credit Analyst, and will continue serving in the Credit Division.

May manages Streamers

Jimmy May

VIRGINIA BEACH—Jimmy May has been named nightclub manager for Streamers, a club in the new Virginia Beach Plaza-Hotel located off the Virginia Beach/Norfolk Expressway on Bonney Road. The announcement was made by Nick Economos, owner and general manager of the Virginia Beach Plaza-Hotel, one of two Plaza-Hotels franchised by the Howard Johnson Company.

As nightclub manager, May is responsible for hiring personnel, controlling inventory, and overseeing general operations of the nightclub.

May has previous management experience with Beaver Run Resort, in Breckenridge, Colorado; Ramada Inn in Greenville, North Carolina; and Regency Lounge in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. May resides in Virginia Beach.

The Virginia Beach Plaza-Hotel is a full-service facility featuring 150 guest rooms, extensive meeting facilities, Nikolas restaurant, indoor/outdoor pool, and a ballroom.

VOA awards banquet held

NORFOLK—Dr. King E. Davis, Virginia's Galt Scholar in public mental health, was the keynote speaker for the Volunteers of America's annual board meeting and dinner held Saturday evening, June 22, at the Omni International Hotel in downtown Norfolk.

A professor of Social Work at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Dr. Davis is no stranger to Hampton Roads. Before assuming his present position earlier this year, he was a professor and chairman of the Department of Human Behavior at Norfolk State. During his ten year stay in the Tidewater Area, he also taught at the Eastern Virginia Medical School, Virginia Union and the University of Maryland Extension.

The evening was highlighted by the presentation of a number of awards. The prestigious VOA Public Service Award was presented to four prominent area citizens: Norfolk attorney and former Virginia Lieutenant Governor, Henry Howell, and his wife, Betty, a Norfolk city councilwoman; William E. Russell, director of the Virginia Beach Community Mental Health Services and Dr. Jay Lazier, director of the Virginia Beach Mental Retardation Services.

The award is given annually to a public or private agency or individuals who have made an outstanding contribution to the quality of life in the community.

Dr. Robert R. Richards, a Virginia Beach professor of Education, is the recipient of the Volunteer Award, given to a non-staff individual who, as a volunteer, has made an outstanding contribution to the local VOA branch. Dr. Richards is past president of the agency's Citizens Advisory Board.

Concordia Real Estate recognized

The National Statistical Research Company in their most recent survey recognized Concordia Real Estate for achieving the Status of Excellence in their 1984 sales performance.

When their clients were surveyed by The National Statistical Research Company/Client Follow-Up, the majority indicated that their service was either good or excellent. They statistically rated in the top 10% of all real estate companies in the United States.

Lee LaDell, President and Head Broker of Concordia Real Estate, accepted the recognition for the firm and stated goals were to place in the top 5% for 1985.

Kirby receives award

NORFOLK—Five members of Old Dominion University's faculty have received awards for excellence at the school's recent commencement exercises.

The Alan Rufus Tonelson Faculty Award, bestowed annually on one faculty member for "devotion to excellence and the significant contributions to both the welfare of the community and the stature of ODU through teaching, research and service," was given to a Virginia Beach resident, Dr. Raymond H. Kirby, professor of psychology. The award carries with it $2,000.

A native of Norfolk, Kirby received his bachelor's degree in psychology from the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary, ODU's predecessor, and master's and doctoral degrees in psychology from William and Mary and Princeton University, respectively.

Change of command

Rieundeau

VIRGINIA BEACH—Rear Admiral (RADM) Ted C. Steele, Jr., USN, was relieved as Commander Tactical Wings Atlantic (COMTACWINGSLANT) by Commodore (COMO) Gerald L. Rieundeau, USN, on Friday, June 21. Guest speaker for the occasion was Vice Admiral (VADM) Robert F. Dunn, USN, Commander Naval Air Force U.S. Atlantic Fleet (COMNAV-AIRLANT).

The 2 p.m. change of command ceremony was held in Hangar 23 at Naval Air Station Oceana in Virginia Beach, staff headquarters for Commander Tactical Wings Atlantic. COMO Rieundeau comes to his new post from Washington, D.C., where he has been director of the operations division in the Office of Budget and Reports, Comptroller of the Navy. He first entered the Navy in July 1953 as a Naval Aviation Cadet.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

The Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries at a meeting held in Richmond, Virginia, on May 3, 1985, adopted the following new or amended regulations pursuant to Sections 29-123, 29-126 and 29-127 of the Code of Virginia, to become effective July 1, 1985.

Part II (VR 325-02.2)

Game

Chapter 1 (VR 325-02.3)

Beaver

Amend R43-(3) to read as follows:

R43. (3) Pelts to be sealed before sale.

It shall be unlawful to buy, sell, barter, exchange, traffic or trade in, bargain for, solicit for, purchase, or transport out of the Commonwealth, any beaver pelt until the pelt has been sealed by an agent of the commission. All beaver pelts required to be sealed under the provisions of this section must be sealed not later than April 1 of the license year in which the animal is taken.

Chapter 5

(VR 325-02.4)

Bobcat

Amend R5-02(2) to read as follows:

R5-02. (2) Open season for trapping. It shall be lawful to trap bobcat from November 15 through January 31, both dates inclusive.

Amend R5-24(5) to read as follows:

R5-24. (5) Pelts to be sealed before sale.

It shall be unlawful to sell, mount, buy, barter, exchange, traffic or trade in, bargain for, solicit for, purchase, or transport out of the Commonwealth, any bobcat pelt until the pelt has been sealed by an agent of the commission. All bobcat pelts or unskinned carcasses required to be sealed under the provisions of this section must be sealed not later than April 1 of the license year in which the animal is taken.

Chapter 6 (VR 325-02.6)

Deer

Amend subsection (a-2) subsection (C) of R6-3 (4), regarding bow and arrow hunting, to read as follows:

(a-2) (C) Bag limit. Notwithstanding other provisions of this regulation, it shall be lawful to take deer of either sex during the archery season provided for in subsections A and B of this section; provided, that the taking of such deer is within the total daily and seasonal bag limits provided for deer, provided further, that no more than two deer of either sex may be taken under the provisions of the special archery license, which shall be in addition to the seasonal bag limits provided for deer.

(VR 325-02.8)

Amend R18-2(2)(3) to read as follows:

R18-2. (3) Open season 1986 and 1987 seasons for bearded turkeys. The season shall begin on April 1 through the second Saturday in April 1986, both dates inclusive, and from the second Saturday in April through the second Saturday in May, 1987, both dates inclusive, from one-half hour before sunrise to 11 a.m. Bearded turkeys may be hunted by calling. It shall be unlawful to use dogs or organized drives for the purpose of hunting.

Chapter 28

(VR 325-04.1)

Falconry

Amend R18-1(1) to read as follows:

R18-1. (1) Definitions. As used in this regulation:

1. "Raptor" means any migratory bird of the order Falconiformes or the order Strigiformes, other than a bald eagle (Haliaeetus leucocephalus).

2. "Permittee" means any holder of a valid falconry permit issued by Virginia or any other state or federal agency authorized to issue such permits or licenses.

3. "Take" means to trap, capture or attempt to trap or capture a raptor for the purposes of falconry.

Amend R18-1.2 (2) by adding a new subsection (d) (10), to read as follows:

(d) (10) A person who is engaged in falconry in the state may engage in falconry in

LEGAL NOTICES

Virginia provided he possesses a valid Virginia nonresident hunting license and satisfactory evidence that such license legally possesses the raptor and a valid falconry permit issued by the state of residence.

Amend R18-1.3 (3), paragraph (a) (4)

(A.4.) to read as follows:

(4) (A) Permittee shall possess only the following raptors, which must not be taken from the wild: An American kestrel; a red-tailed hawk; or a red-shouldered hawk.

Amend R18-1.3 (3), paragraph (c) (2)

(C.2.) to read as follows:

(2) (C) Permittee may not possess more than three raptors and may not obtain more than two raptors taken from the wild for replacement bird during any 12-month period.

Amend R18-1.5 (5) by adding thereto a new subsection (d) (D), to read as follows:

(d) (D) A permittee may replace the numbered seamless band on a captive bred bird with a standard adjustable yellow marker furnished by the Fish and Wildlife Service, however, once the seamless marker is removed, the bird may no longer be purchased, sold, or bartered.

Amend R18-1.6 (5) by amending subsection (b) (B) to read as follows:

(b) (B) to read as follows: (b) (B) In addition, there shall be an exception for taking a raptor in Virginia, also called passagers (hawks caught well before first flight), from September 15 through January 11 of each year only; except that the marked raptors may be retrapped at any time.

(d) (D) A nonresident raptor trapping permit is issued to applicants for the purpose of taking a raptor in Virginia, provided that his resident state is a state listed in Paragraph (k), Subpart C, part 21.29, Chapter 1 of Title 50, Code of Federal Regulations, as a participating state, and his resident state issues nonresident falconry permits or licenses, or otherwise provide for the taking of raptors by nonresidents. Nonresident applicants shall submit a copy of a valid resident state falconry permit and a copy of a valid import permit from their resident state. Nonresident permits shall be issued only in the general or master class.

(e) (E) A permittee may purchase, sell, or barter any lawfully possessed raptor which was taken in captivity under authority of a raptor propagation permit issued under Part 21.30, Chapter 1 of Title 50, Code of Federal Regulations, and handled with a numbered seamless marker issued or authorized by the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Amend R18-1.6 (5) to read as follows:

R18-1.6. (5) Season for raptor hunting.

It shall be lawful to hunt nonmigratory game birds and game animals with raptors from October 1 through March 31, both dates inclusive.

Add a new regulation (section) number R18-1.8 (1) (9) to read as follows:

R18-1.8. (1) (9) Sunday hunting. It shall be lawful to hunt nonmigratory game birds and game animals with raptors on Sunday.

Add a new regulation (section) number R18-1.8.2 (10) to read as follows:

R18-1.8.2. (10) Out of season. A species or sex, etc., kills by raptors. A permittee whose raptor accidentally kills quarry that is out of season or of the wrong species or sex, or otherwise permitted, must leave the dead quarry where it lies; except, that the raptor may feed upon the quarry prior to leaving the site of the kill.

Chapter 22

Permits

Amend R22-3 (3) to read as follows:

R22-3. (3) (14) Shooting wild birds and wild animals from stationary vehicle by disabled person.

Any person, upon application to a game warden and the presentation of a medical doctor's written statement, such person is permanently unable to walk, in the discretion of such game warden, be issued a permit to shoot wild birds and wild animals from a stationary vehicle during established open hunting seasons and in accordance with other existing laws and regulations. Such permit will be issued on a form provided by the commission, which may authorize shooting from a stationary vehicle not less than 300 feet from any public road or highway, and only when the hunter is properly licensed to hunt. Such permit shall be nontransferable, and any person found in the possession of any person not entitled to such permit shall be subject to immediate citation by a game warden. Deer of either sex may be taken under the provisions of this permit in those counties where deer hunting is permitted.

Part IV

(VR 325-04)

Watercraft

Chapter 28

(VR 325-04.2)

Motorboat Numbering

Amend R28-1 (1) to read as follows:

R28-1. (1) Application for certificate of number.

An application for a certificate of number for a motorboat, as required by the Virginia Motorboat and Watercraft Safety Law, shall contain the following information: The name and address of owner, county or city where boat is principally kept, present owner, on boat if different, hull material (wood, fiberglass, metal, inflatable, wood, etc.), type of propulsion (outboard, inboard and outboard/outboard, auxiliary or outboard, inboard, type of fuel (gas, diesel, electric), make and year built (if known), length overall, statement as to use (recreation, ferry, dealer, manufacturer, commercial passenger, commercial fishing, commercial other), a statement of ownership by applicant and signature of owner.

Amend R29-5 (5) to read as follows:

R29-5. (5) Report of transfer of ownership of motorboat, notification of theft or recovery of vessel, or loss or destruction of certificate.

Whenever a motorboat for which there exists a certificate of number changes ownership, the seller shall report such transfer to the commission on a form provided by the commission. The holder of a certificate of number shall notify the commission within 15 days of the theft or recovery of a vessel, or loss or destruction of a valid certificate of number.

NOTICE OF

PUBLIC HEARING

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission will hold a Public Hearing on Tuesday, July 9, 1985 at 12:00 Noon in the Council Chambers of the City Hall Building, Princess Anne Courthouse, Virginia Beach, Virginia. A briefing session will be held at 9:00 a.m. in the Planning Department Conference Room, Generations Building. Planning Commission action is not a final determination of the application, but only a recommendation to the City Council as the viewpoint of the Planning Commission. Final determination of the application is to be made by City Council at a later date, after Public Notice in a newspaper having general circulation with the City.

Those members of the public interested in attending the public hearing should be advised that, for reasons the Planning Commission deems appropriate, certain items on the agenda may be heard out of order and that it should not be assumed that the order listed below will be exactly followed during the public hearing.

The staff reviews of some or all of the items on this agenda suggest that certain conditions be attached to approval by City Council. However, it should not be assumed that those conditions constitute all the conditions that will ultimately be attached to the project. Staff agencies may impose further conditions and requirements during administration of applicable city ordinances.

Faheys Celebrate Fortieth

On Sunday, June 23, Barbara and John Fahey celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary. They were married in the Cathedral of the Air at Lakehurst, New Jersey where John was serving as a command pilot in a Navy airship squadron. John Fahey is an associate professor of foreign languages and literatures at Old Dominion University, a member of the Virginia Beach City Public School Board and President of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club. Barbara is Vice President of the Inlawnview Civic League and a watercolorist. The Faheys have three children, Kathleen, John, and Barbara and five grandchildren.

Local hospitals cooperate in program

VIRGINIA BEACH—Children's Hospital of The King's Daughters and Virginia Beach General Hospital today announced that a 14-bed pediatric unit will be cooperatively operated beginning in August. The announcement was made jointly by Stephen S. Perry, CHKD president, and W. Earl Willis, VBGH president.

Children's Hospital will manage the existing unit under contract with Virginia Beach General. CHKD will provide specialized education in pediatrics for VBGH staff members. The Head Nurse will be Patricia Church, R.N.

"The decision to affiliate with CHKD is a natural extension of our direction in pediatric care at VBGH," said Willis. "We recently opened The Birthing Center of Hampton Roads, the area's most sophisticated operation of its type and one of the best in America. Our commitment to pediatrics is equally strong, and CHKD is the most qualified provider to bring expertise to this patient service."

This unit will be geared toward providing specialized care to those patients younger than 18.

"We are very happy to enter into this arrangement with VBGH and offer our expertise accumulated over 89 years of pediatric care," Perry said.

"This cooperative relationship strengthens the development of a comprehensive network for the care of children. Also, as a result of our specialized services at VBGH many children will not have to be transferred to CHKD. We cannot imagine a better partner in bringing pediatric health care to the state's largest city."

GRAND OPENING WEEKEND at "Fountain Cove"

Found: Beautiful Water Property with 3,500 Foot Frontage On Hull Creek!

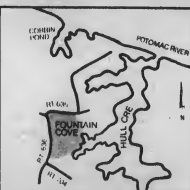

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY TO BUY ONE OF ONLY 33 PARCELS AVERAGING 2+ ACRES EACH FOR AS LITTLE AS $6,950 AND PAYMENTS AS LOW AS $69.89 A MONTH. OUR LAST PROPERTY SOLD OUT IN JUST A FEW WEEKS. SO VISIT "FOUNTAIN COVE," BUY NOW...AND ENJOY FOR A LIFETIME!

The PARCEL YOU WANT at a REASONABLE PRICE "Fountain Cove" offers you the choice of completely wooded, partially wooded or open meadow parcels that are either water front, or water access bordered by hard surface state maintained roads. All lot owners have full access to the community area on the water with a boat dock and recreation grounds. The property fronts on the protective waters of Rogers Creek, a branch of huge Hull Creek, with miles and miles of shoreline for boating, swimming, crabbing and fishing before it joins the majestic Potomac River.

SPECIAL Part of the World Hull Creek is located right at the mouth of the Potomac and the Chesapeake Bay, directly across from Point Lookout, Maryland. The historic fishing town of Reedville is within a short drive, with its beautiful old homes, marinas, and cruise ship to quaint Tangier Island. Shopping, churches, and a hospital are nearby as well as good restaurants that feature crabs, oysters in season and "fish of the day." For dining in, catch your own or buy fresh from local watermen. The waters of Rogers and Hull Creeks are deep enough for small power boats and sailing. And at high tide, canoes, row boats and sail boats with "centerboards up" can usually navigate the shoals at the mouth of Hull Creek providing entry to the Potomac. The creeks offer 8 miles or more of ample waters, majestic sights, plentiful fish and scurrying crabs by the bushel! If you've never been here in Virginia's Northern Neck, you will appreciate its rural character, farmlands, creeks, rivers, Chesapeake Bay, our friendly people, great seafood, fresh vegetables, sunrises and sunsets on the waters that surround this part of the world which most folks believe is truly "God's Country." At "Fountain Cove," you can be a part of it. Here the land is level, then gently rolls down to Rogers Creek. There's no erosion and the earth is rich, having grown crops of wheat, barley, corn and soybean for well over a century. With the abundant seafood and your own garden life here can be self-sustaining if you're so inclined. Or, it can be the location for the weekend retreat, summer cottage or retirement home that you've dreamed about. When you come to visit this weekend, bring a picnic lunch. We'll supply a variety of cold beverages, the shade of pines, oak, hickory and maple and the refreshing sounds and smells of clean water and a cooling breeze!

BUILD NOW or CAMP While You Make Your Plans to Build! While permanent camping is not allowed, temporary camping on your parcel for a maximum 30 day period at one time is authorized so that you can use your property right away and have all rights to enjoy the boat dock and recreation area. All sites have been individually inspected by the Virginia Health Department and roads, electricity and septic approvals are included with this offer.

About BAY LAND and DIRECT OWNER FINANCING

The company is owned by a local gentleman who grew up close by. Being a native, he knows the local farmers, watermen and landowners and is on the lookout to buy relatively small properties that can be developed for people like you to purchase and enjoy. You can buy for AS LITTLE AS 10% DOWN and tailor your payments for UP TO 10 YEARS. The more you put down the lower the interest rate you get. Great savings are offered with all cash purchases. Check out the tax breaks.

NO SALES PRESSURE

BAY LAND PROPERTIES has developed a number of prime parcels in this area, the most recent being "Salt Air" and "Myers Landing" which were sold out in a few weeks. Since we know the values are good and our customers obviously do, we don't have to resort to gimmicks and arm-twisting tactics. You can roam around all you want with no sales assistance, or, if you prefer, we have sales people to show you around and help out any way they can. They all live here in the Northern Neck so they can provide just about any information you may wish.

Get a GIFT FOR CALLING and BE PREPARED TO BUY We do offer you 5 gallons of gasoline FREE to help defray the cost of your visit, plus a FREE copy of "WATERMEN OF THE CHESAPEAKE BAY," a full-color pictorial book of this area by noted photographer John Hurt Whitehead, III (a $19.95 value) if you call in advance for a Saturday or Sunday morning appointment. This way you can avoid the crowd and help us, too. And since you'll probably see just the site you desire, be prepared to bid your lot with 5% of the purchase price.
